Disclaimer: Although all genealogical and family information (names, spellings, dates, places, relationships, stories, etc) has been gathered in good faith the nature of such information can never be 100% accurate due to variable reliability of documents. Tracing the Lauzon family is complicated by the variations in the spelling/miss-spelling of the name, including Louson, Loson, Lozen, Lawson, Lozo, etc. Dates are notoriously misstated. Locations frequently do not indicate if they are PO locations, cities, villages, towns, or counties, so must be taken with caution.

I used to think that the locations recorded for births and residences accurately give the communities that our ancestors made their home. However, research into the Lauzon and Cholette families dashed that thought. Their recorded locations were not the actual place that our families lived, but the township or county where they resided, and sometimes were miles away from the true home. Clarence Creek, Alfred, St. Thomas, and Escanaba took on new meaning, and I had a deeper appreciation of the rural nature of their homes.

THE EARLY LIFE OF JOHN B LAUZON

John Baptiste Lauzon was born on December 20, 1876 to Antoine and Liza Lauzon (see Book 2) at their farm near the town of Clarence Creek in Clarence Township of Russell County in Ontario Providence, Canada.

John was the 4th child of 16 in the farming family, and the 4th boy.

On a trip to Clarence, the daughters of John found that St. Felicite, the only Catholic Church in Clarence Creek, had burned and all the records were destroyed. No birth records were available there [5]. However, centralized

Family of Antoine Lauzon & Liza Lalonde

John was the 4th child in the all-boy initial Lauzon family, which ended up having 16 children. Ultimately, there were 5 girls and 11 boys in the farm family. The family included:

- 1-Edward Lauzon (1873-1930)
- 2-Antoine Lauzon Jr (1873-1951)
- 3-Alphonse Lauzon (1875-1954)
- 4-John Baptist Lauzon (1876-1956)
- 5-Catherine Lauzon (1877-unk)
- 6-Hilaire (Eli) Lauzon (1878-1953)
- 7-Hormidas (1880-1967)
- 8-Alfred Lauzon (1882-1956)
- 9-Pierre (Peter) Lauzon (1884-1975)
- 10-Rose Alba Lauzon Poirier (1886)
- 11-Armoza Lauzon Charbonneau (1888)
- 12-Amedee (Homer) Lauzon (1891-1975)
- 13-Eveleen Lauzon O'Brien (1892-1918)
- 14-Isabelle Lauzon Hull (1893-1989)
- 15-Albina Lauzon Lalonde (1894-1935)
- 16-Emide Lauzon (1898-1975)

Eveleen died young at 26 years, Edward at 57 years; but, the rest lived into their 70's and beyond.

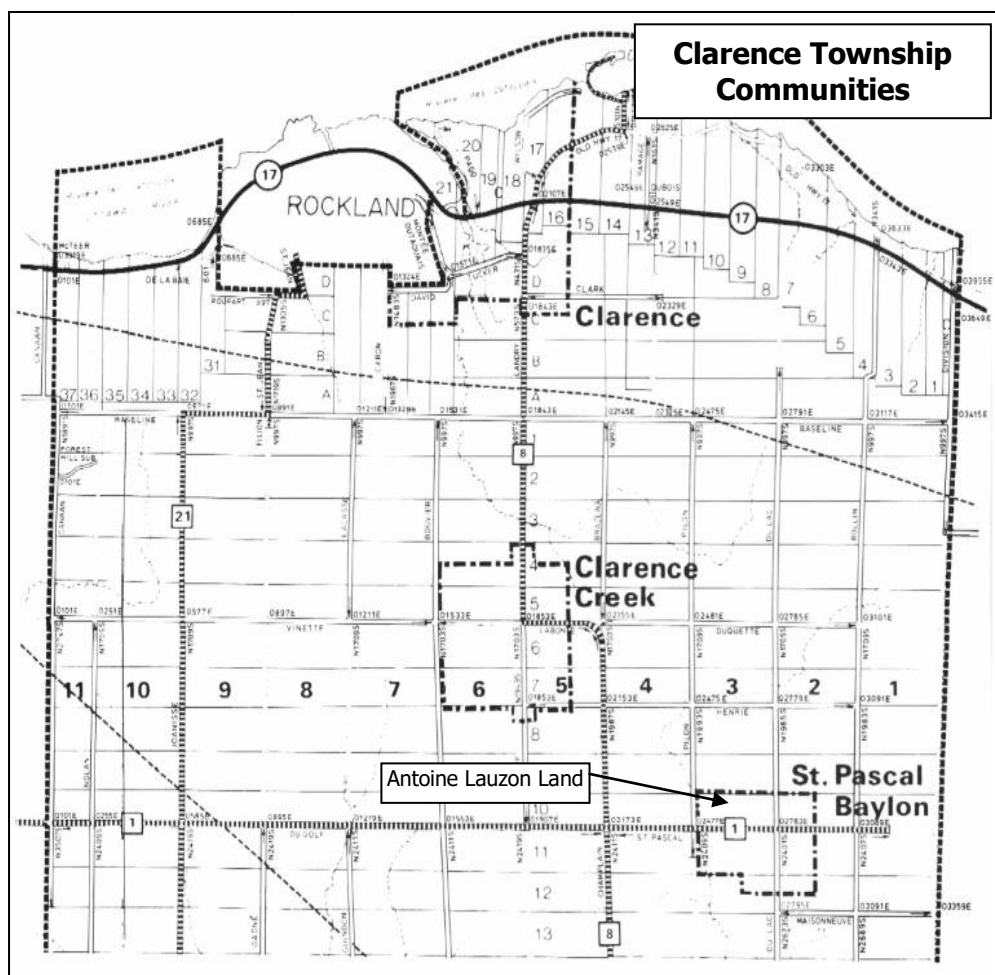

Church records showed that he was baptized on Dec 23, 1876

Clarence Creek is a small farming community located about 35 miles east of Ottawa, the capital of Canada. Clarence was pronounced as "Claire-ense" [7]. Although the area is in the English speaking Province of Ontario, Clarence residents speak predominantly the French language.

A review of Canadian census and cemetery records showed that many relatives and ancestors of the Lauzon & Cholette families lived in the area east of Ottawa. Note that the areas north of the Ottawa River are in Quebec Province and those south are in Ontario.

John was born and raised about 20 miles west of where his future wife, Marceline Cholette, was raised, which was Alfred Township in Prescott County, Ontario.

The Lauzon farm was located about 5 miles southeast of the village. The family probably attended the St. Felicite Catholic Church in Clarence Creek, since that is where family religious events took place. However, Antoine's farm appeared to be across the road from the future and more rural St. Pascal Baylon Catholic Church and there are several Lauzon family members who were buried there. In his family research trip in 2018, Bill Lauzon found that both facilities were closed at the time so no one was available to confirm any information.

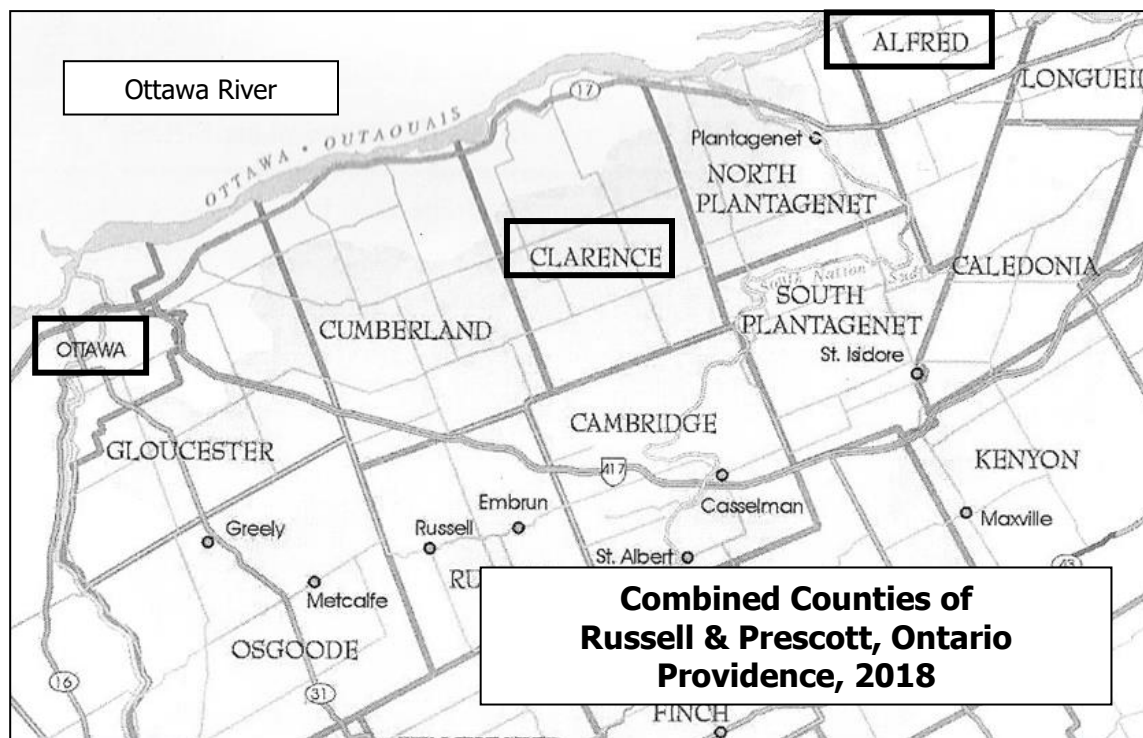

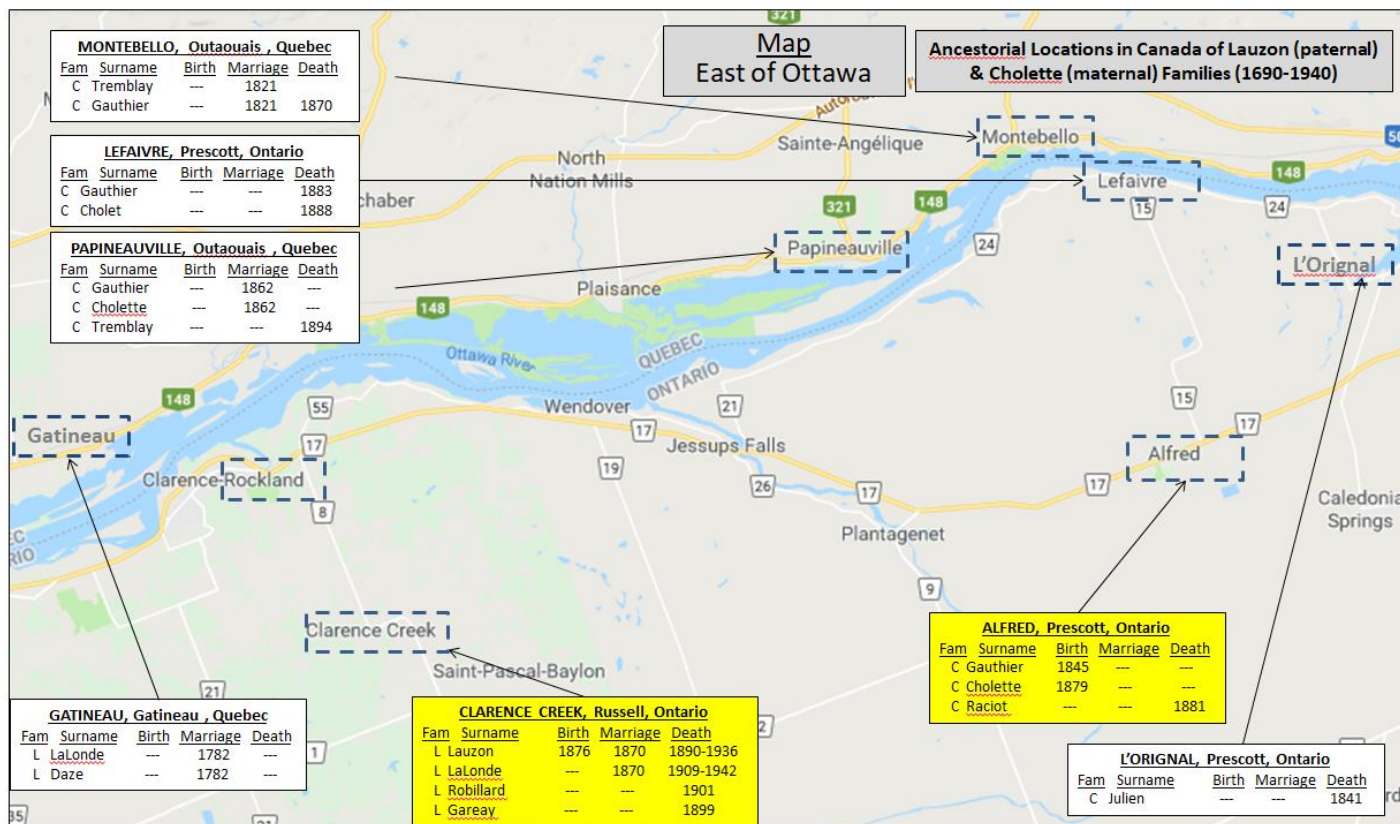

The land in the area is fairly flat and good for farming. The Antoine Lauzon farm in Clarence Township was near his father Edward's farm, his brother's Andre Hillarie and Pierre Lauzon farms [23]. They were also located near the farms of Antoine's in-laws, the Lalonde's.

They must have been a close-knit family, as evidenced by how several joined one another when they came to America in later life. A summary of each of John's siblings is given in Part 2, Chapter 1 of the Lauzon Ancestry Book.

The Canadian censuses of 1881 and 1891 provide some information about John family and their family farm.

EARLY YEARS OF MARCELINE CHOLETTE

Marie Philomène Marcéline Cholette was the 5th of six children born to Damien and Philomene Cholette on March 24, 1879 [12] in the farm community of Lefaivre, in Alfred township of Prescott County, Ontario Providence, Canada. Usually, birth records recorded only the township rather than the more refined location of the precise community.

For more information on the Cholette family please refer to Book 2, "The Ancestral Story of the Cholette Family" in my series on our ancestors.

Some records give Marceline's birth location as St. Thomas, which has been interpreted by some to refer the large urban community of St. Thomas in southern Ontario. However, since most children were born at home at that time, and the location of the Damien Cholette farm in 1879 was in Lefaivre of Alfred Township, Ontario, it makes sense that she was actually born in Lefaivre. At the time of Marceline's birth, the community was often referred to as St. Thomas, which was the only Catholic Church in the community.

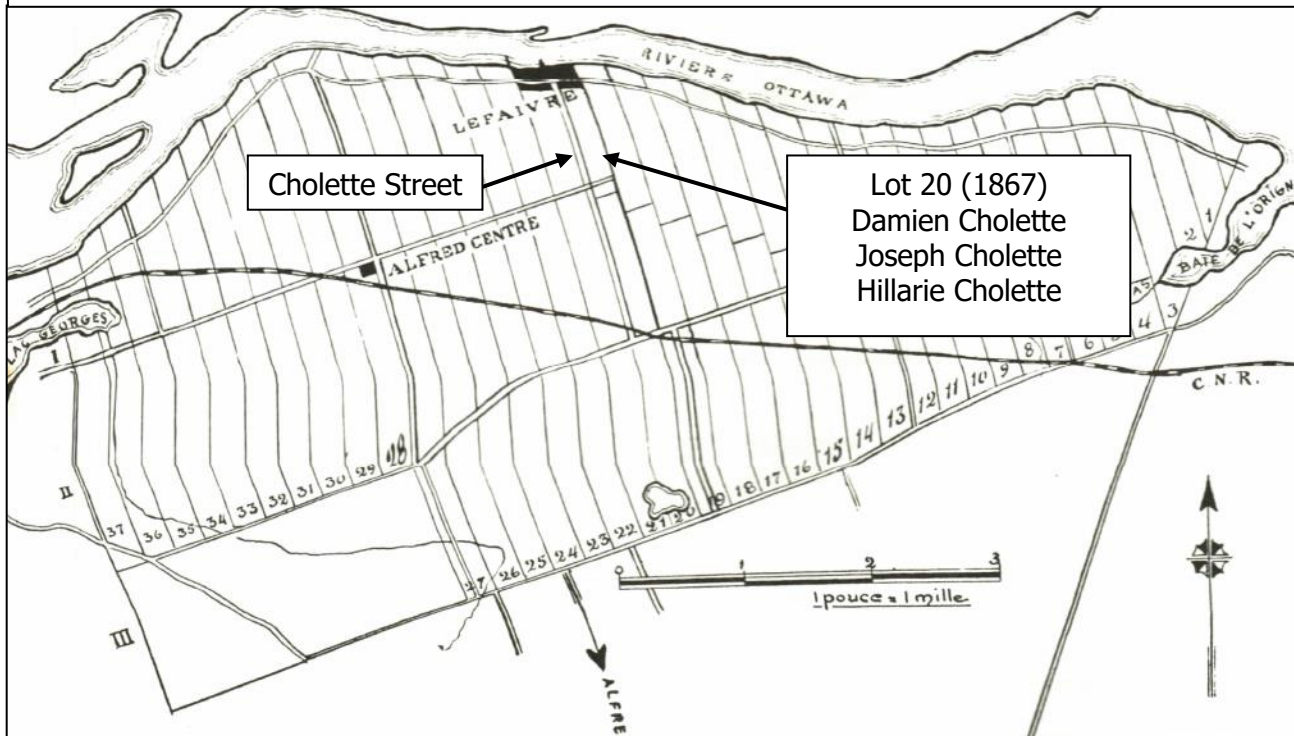

Alfred is both a village and a township. The small township is located around 20 miles east of Clarence Creek, where John Lauzon was raised in the neighboring county. The village is a small farming community located about 5 miles south of the Ottawa River.

Most likely, Marceline was born near the community of Lefaivre rather than the Village of Alfred, as commonly thought. Alfred is shown on many records because it was the name of the Township, and probably had a Post Office. Records show the Cholette family homestead as Lot 20 in Concession 2, which extended from near the Ottawa River in the village of Lefaivre. The Cholette families were prominent landowners in the Lefaivre (Alfred) area. In fact, the major north-south street in the community of Lefaivre is named, "Cholette Street" and is in the location of the west boundary of the Cholette land. Marceline was baptized on April 2, 1879 at St. Thomas ("Toe-mas"), Catholic Church in the village of Lefaivre. It turns out that Marceline's grandfather donated 8 acres of the land that St. Thomas, was built on. In fact, Damien, Marceline's father, was one of five trustees that built the church in 1879.

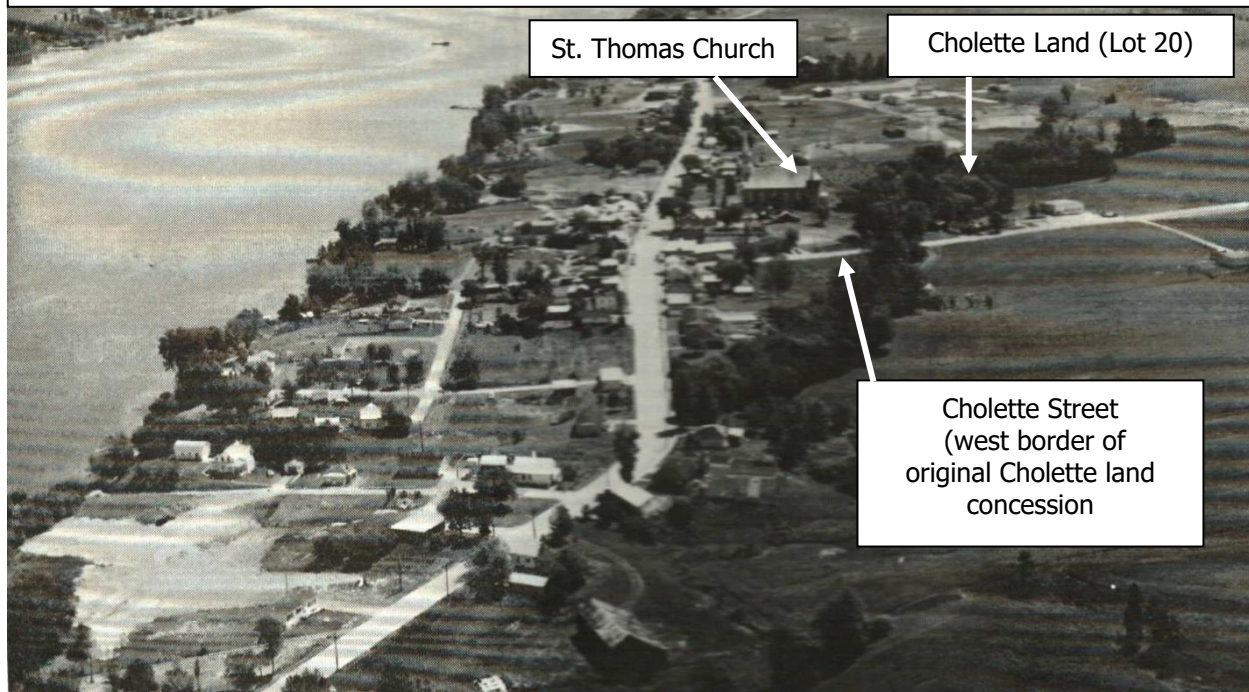

Marceline's mother, Philomene, died when Marceline was about 2 years old. Her father was remarried shortly thereafter to a recent widow, Rose Delima Treppanier, who had 5 children of her own. Marceline thought that her father, Damien Cholette, was a saint. Later in life, John B, her husband, would tease her about her goodness and his believed "Sainthood" by using Damien's name interchangeably with the word saint, "If you're Damien" [8].

In 1888 Damien moved the family from Canada to the Escanaba area in Upper Michigan, when Marceline was about 9 years old [19]. While there, his children were placed in the care of various relatives, as was the custom of the time. Clemence, Marceline's older married sister, took the young Marceline in and raised her. Marceline was living in the Bark River Township with the Clemence Green family during the 1900 US Census, most likely in the Shaffer area. It turned out that John B Lauzon, her future husband, lived in the same general area, although it's doubted that she knew him.

LAUZONS IMMIGRATE TO AMERICA

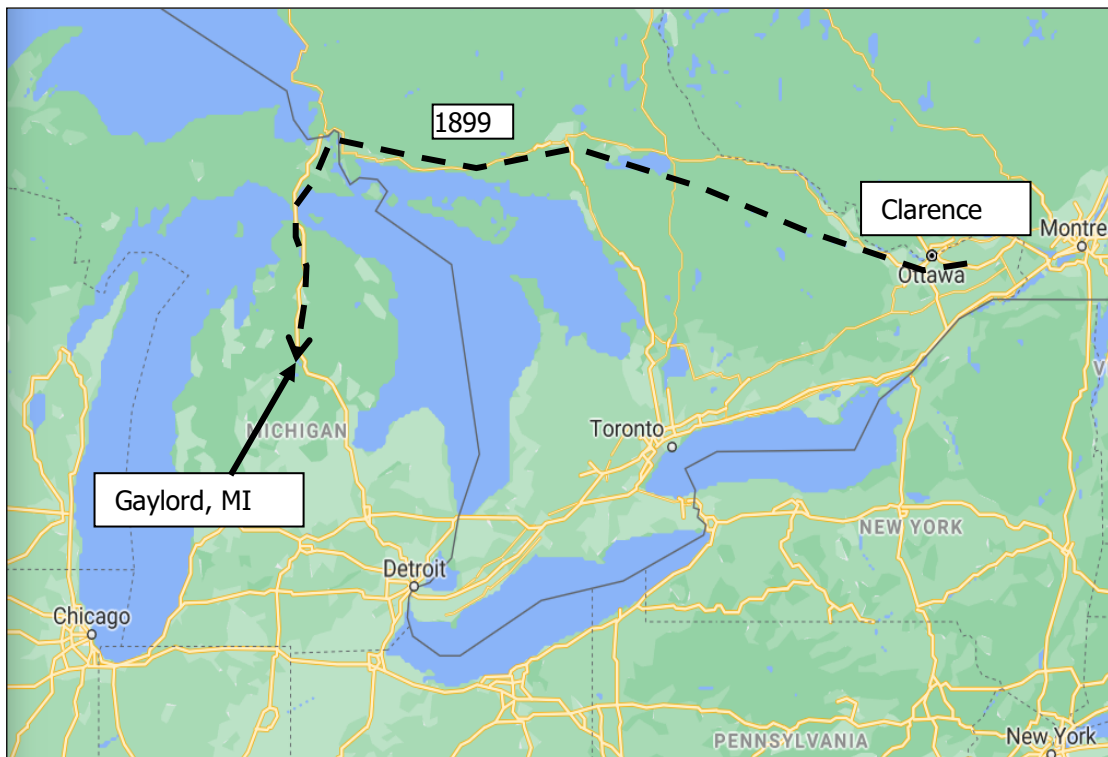

In Sept 1899 [19], when he was almost 23 years old, John left home to come to the US via Soo Michigan to look for work. He traveled with his brother, Hillarie (Eli), to meet his brother, Edward, and sister, Armosa, in Gaylord, MI. [24] Edward had emigrated to Michigan in the early 1890's and did not appear in the 1891 Canadian Census listing of Antoine's family in Clarence Creek. John didn't need much incentive to leave home, because he never liked farming [5].

The two brothers soon moved to upper Michigan, near Escanaba, to look for work [1]. In 1900, the US Census in Michigan showed John had been employed as a day laborer for a year, and lived in a boarding house in Escanaba Township. He was one of only half of the 23 hired hands living there that could speak, read, and wrote English [22].

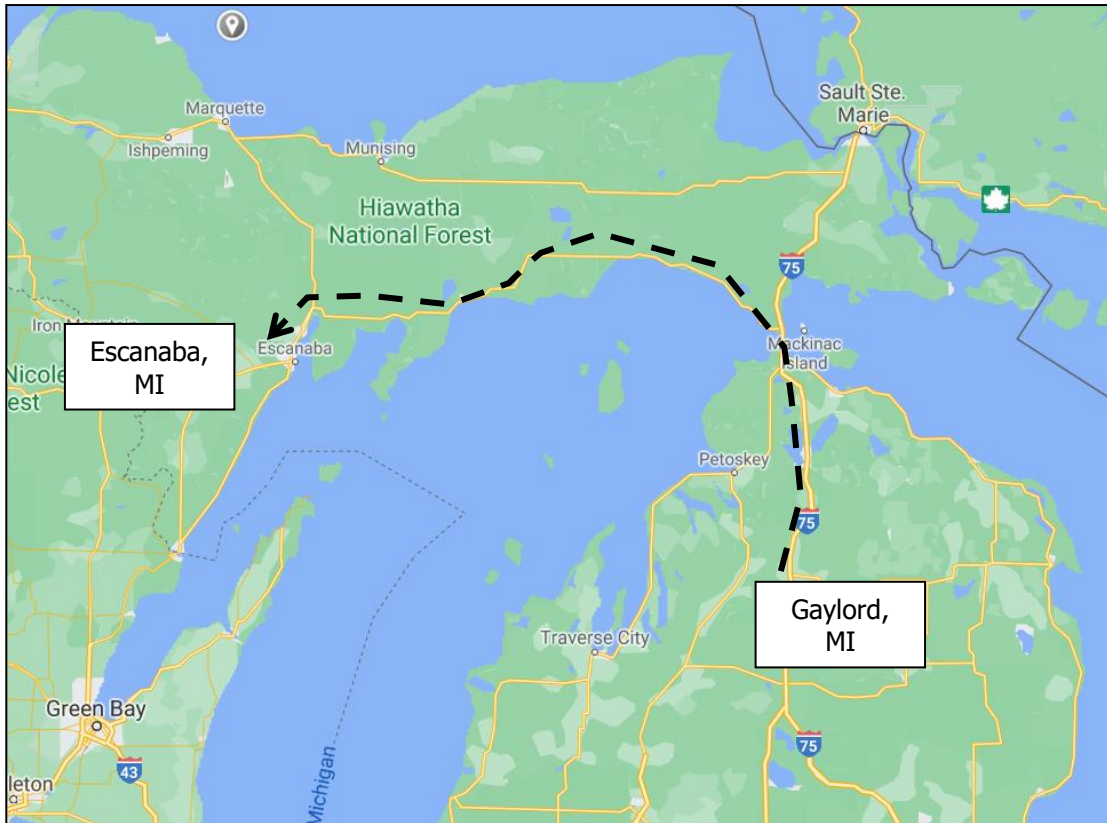

Escanaba Township produced a lot of lumber during the late 1800s and many French Canadians came to work in the forests and sawmills. The 100 year anniversary booklet of Holy Family Church, which is located in the Township, specifically named Clarence Creek, Canada as the birthplace of many French immigrants who came to the area. Most likely this is what drew John B Lauzon to Escanaba and to settle in the Township.

There was no Catholic Church Escanaba Township so many French Canadians traveled to Gladstone or Schaffer to attend Mass. This may be where John B met Marceline Cholette, who lived in Schaffer and attended Sacred Heart Church in the community.

CHOLETTE FAMILY IN SCHAFFER

The Cholette was shown in the 1900 US census and marriage records as living in Bark River; but some show them living in Schaffer. Bark River is both a village and a township and Schaffer is an unincorporated community in the northern portion of Bark River Township. When Schaffer was established it was primarily a French speaking community. The Sacred Heart Parish was a Catholic Church building located in Schaffer, and it is said that Masses were performed in French at the parish for a long time. There are a few tombstones in the Sacred Heart Cemetery that are in French.

Sacred Heart Church was merged with St. George Parish in Bark River and St. Michael Parish in Perronville to form the St. Elizabeth Ann Seton Parish, in Bark River. In December 1996, the Sacred Heart building in Schaffer was closed.

THE LaLONDE BOARDING HOUSE

Marceline lived and worked in the Lalonde Boarding House in Escanaba that was co-owned by Mr. Lalonde, her cousin [7]. It may have been a recent job since the 1900 US Census did not show any occupation for the 21 year old Marceline and the 1902 Escanaba City Directory did not list her living in the city. Marceline learned dress making from Mrs. Lalonde [7] Mrs. DeMoulin and Mrs. Deaux were cousins of Marceline.

The Lauzon sisters referred to the establishment as the "Lalonde Boarding House", but the Escanaba City Directories do not list this business name during 1900-1909. However, the "Washington House" (hotel) is listed with 'Lacome & Lalonde' as proprietors, is probably the correct name of the place that Marceline worked. The 1905 Escanaba City Directory showed Mrs. Julia Lalonde as operating the facility and living there. The hotel was located at 601 Thomas Street (renamed "Escanaba Street in 1920 when many street names were converted to numbers). The hotel was listed in the 1909 City Directory with G.W. Kaufmann as proprietor, so the Lalonde's must have divested of it sometime prior to 1909.

The family story says that John Lauzon met Marceline when he came to Escanaba to visit Mrs. Lalonde, his distant cousin [7]. I wouldn't be surprised if the handsome John B saw or met the good-looking Marceline in Schaffer and followed her to the Boarding House where she worked.

MARRIAGE

John and Marceline were married in Sacred Heart Catholic Church in Schaffer, Michigan on Monday morning, Jan 8, 1906. Fr. Dassylvia performed the ceremony and Marceline's brother Joseph Hillarie (Eli) Cholette and his future wife, Eva Boda, were groomsman and bridesmaid. John was 29 and she 26 years old at the time. A wedding dinner was given at the home of Marceline's parents, Joseph Damien Cholette in Schaffer. Afterwards there was dancing at Leclaire's hall. The party continued on Tuesday evening in Bark River at the home of Zotique Lalonde.

Father Dassylvia performed the ceremony. Eli Cholette of Escanaba, a brother of the bride was groomsman and Miss Eva Boda of Escanaba, was bridesmaid. After the wedding ceremony a fine wedding dinner was served at the home of the bride's parents and in the evening a wedding dance was held at Leclaire's hall which was largely attended. On Tuesday evening the wedding party drove to the home of Zotique Lalond at Bark River where the festivities were continued. The bride and groom received many beautiful presents.

THE INITIAL FAMILY of THREE

When first married 1906 they lived in Schaeffer, Michigan [5], the community Marceline resided in prior to marriage. It has not been discovered precisely where they or the Cholette/Green families lived in the community. Perhaps they initially lived with her father, Damien Cholette, or her older sister, Clemence Greene.

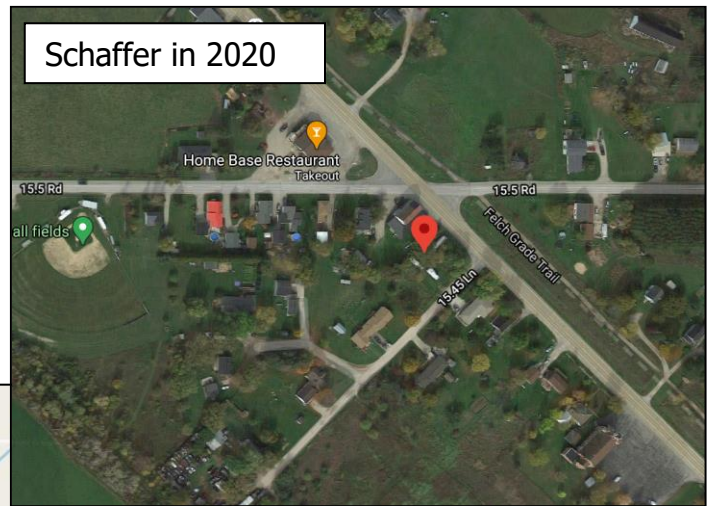

Per their birth records three girls were born into the family while they lived in Shaffer:

- Blanche in November 1906,
- Lucille in April, 1908, and
- Evelyn in July, 1909.

Sacred Heart Church was discontinued in 1996 and only the cemetery remained (also known as Schaffer Cemetery). Lot 35 was listed as the Cholette Plot, where only Armand C (1888-1911), Marceline's 1st cousin, was buried.

Schaffer is an unincorporated community within the Bark River township, north of the Bark River. It is situated on M-69, about 14 miles northwest of Escanaba.

VARIOUS RESIDENCES

John and Marceline lived in several different small towns. There is inconsistency in City Directory records and birth records that show where the new family lived. The 1909 City Directory showed the family living at 916 or 918 Wells in the City of Escanaba. In April, 1910 the US Census in the city of Escanaba showed the family renting a rental building at 916 Wells Street (now 1st Street South).

Although the documents don't reflect it and could not be confirmed by records, it appears that John moved his family to Northland in late 1910. Eventually, one of John's sisters moved to Northland, Michigan, followed by her brothers [6] in around 1910. It is here that the birth records of two additional children were born: Joseph Samuel in December, 1910, and Yvonne in Nov, 1911.

Meanwhile, some of John's relatives had moved to Kingsford and Iron Mountain, Michigan, and John moved the family to the City of Escanaba.

The 1911 Escanaba City Directory showed John and Marceline rented a house at 217 N. Sarah Street (now 14th Street). The 1915 Directory showed him working at the same place, but living at 1800 Park Avenue (now South 5th Street).

By 1918 the family had moved to at 421 S Oaks (now South 16th Street) in Escanaba [21].

In 1919 and 1920 the family lived at 416 18th Street South. The 1920 US Census listed them owning the home.

Escanaba was the name of an Ojibwa village in this area in the early 19th century.^[9] The Ojibwa were one of the Anishinabek, Algonquian-speaking tribes who settled and flourished around the Great Lakes. The word "Escanaba" roughly translates from Ojibwa and other regional Algonquian languages to "land of the red buck", although some people maintain that it refers to "flat rock".

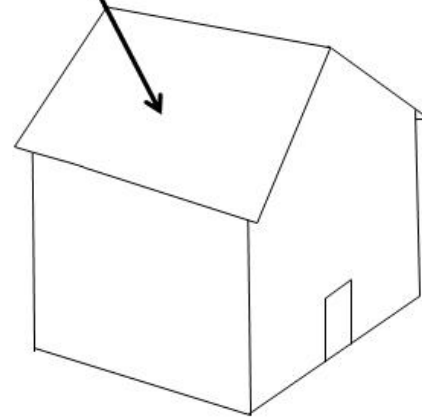

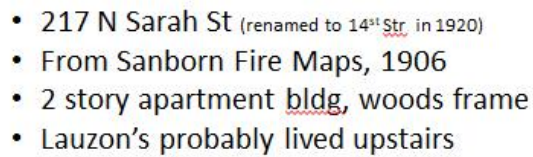

As a European-American settlement, Escanaba was founded in 1863 as a port town by surveyor Eli P. Royce. Early industry was the processing and harvesting of lumber, dominated in this area by Daniel Wells Jr., Jefferson Sinclair, and Nelson Ludington. Ludington later moved his headquarters to Chicago, where he also entered banking. I. Stephenson established a successor lumber company in the area.

THE LAUZON FAMILY GROWS BY FIVE

While in Escanaba, the remaining Lauzon children were born. Irene came in Feb, 1914 and Joseph Albert in May, 1915. This was followed by three more girls, Marie in April, 1917, Bernice in Feb, 1919 and finally Dorothy in June, 1922. Marceline had given birth to ten children between 1906 and 1922. Her last child was born when she was 43 years old.

The Lauzon aunts and uncles include:

1. Blanche Lauzon Wolters, Gellenbeck (1906-1993)
2. Lucille Lauzon Kittson (1908-1985)
3. Evelyn Lauzon Spielbauer (1909-1980)

Marie, Bernice, and Dorothy agreed that Irene was always the brave girl in the family. She was street-smart and not timid about tackling new things. Irene was the one that came to the rescue when anybody needed anything. The common saying was, "We'll send Irene!". Irene admitted years later at a family picnic, "I enjoyed it because I was doing something to help someone." Whenever anyone had the flu in the family, it was always Irene that was sent to Uncle Eli's tavern to bring back some whiskey or brandy. [6-9]

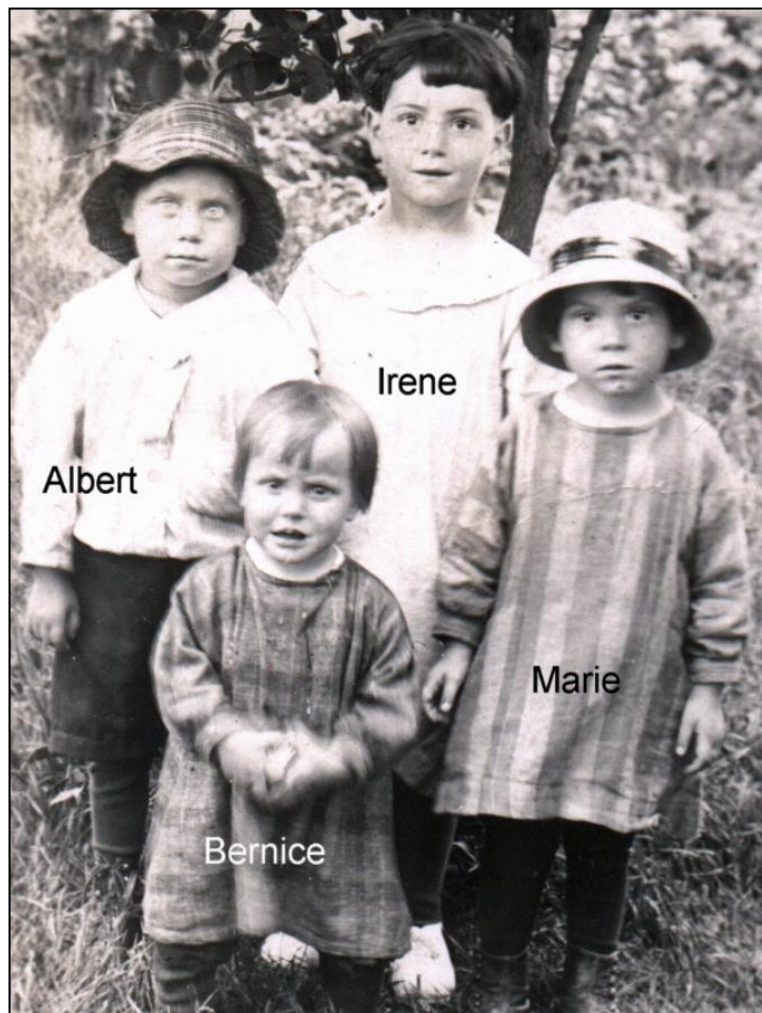

When John registered for the World War I draft in 1918, he was identified to be medium height and build, with blue eyes and dark hair [21]. Barb Wolters Reuss said the her mother Blanche said that John was near six feet tall. [27]

John became a naturalized American citizen on Jan 10, 1921 in Michigan [19]

JOHN'S JOBS, 1910-1922

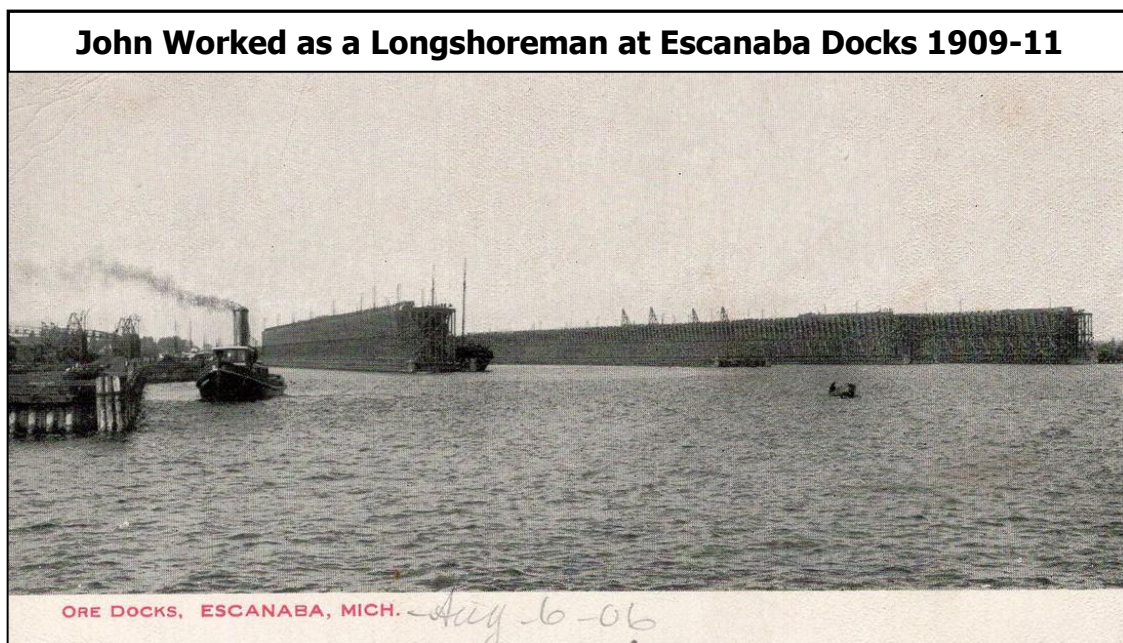

In April, 1910 the US Census in the city of Escanaba recorded that John worked at a long shoreman on the Escanaba docks.

The 1911 Escanaba City Directory showed John worked as a driver (teamster) for C. Maloney and Company in the city's downtown area. Maloney was a dealer of "Ceresota" flour, feed, hay, and grains. The 1915 Directory showed him working at the same place. John probably drove teams of horses when he made deliveries. It's a coincidence that Joseph Albert's father worked as a driver (in Michigan) and Mary Martha Cook's (Lauzon) father used his own car as a "taxi" (in Wyoming) at about the same time.

By 1918 John worked as a railroad section hand for the Chicago Northwestern Railroad in Escanaba [21].

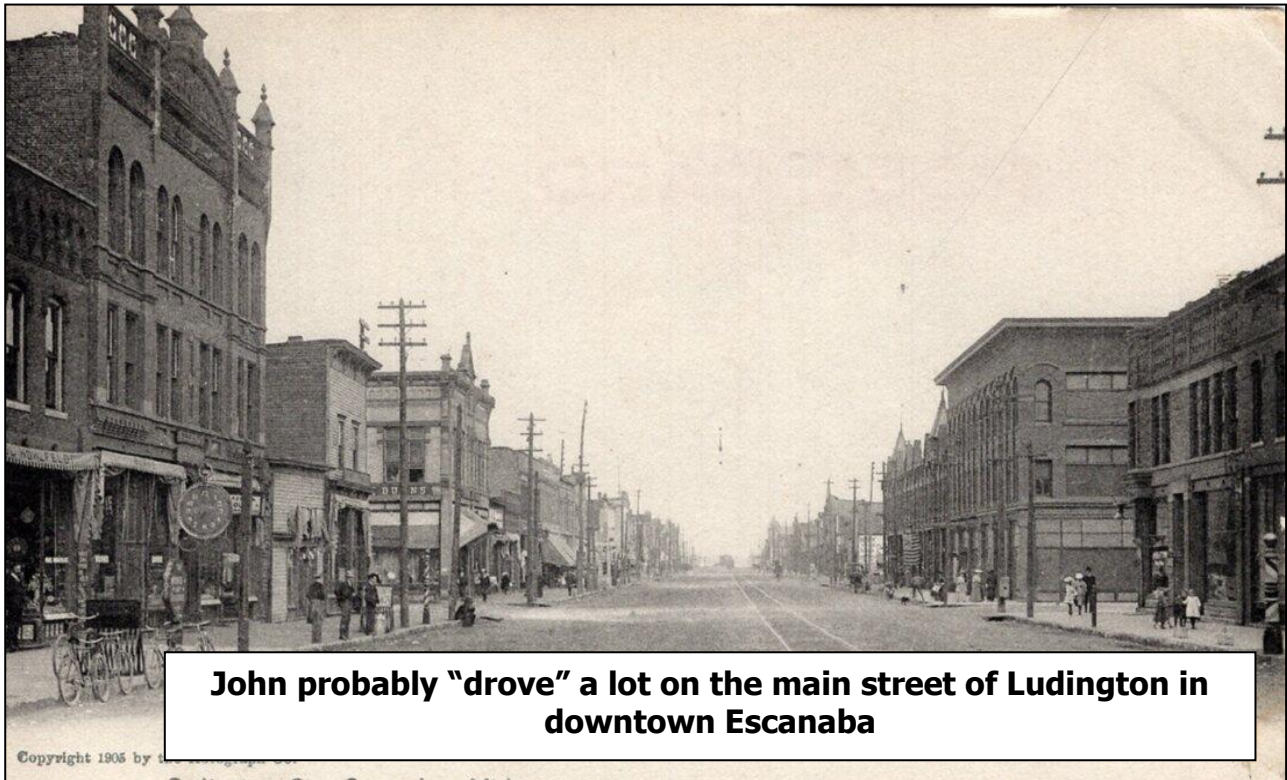

In 1919 and 1920 John was a laborer for a wood ware factory in Escanaba. In Dec 1919 he broke his left leg in a saw mill accident at Escanaba Manufacturing.

The Most Remarkable Story of Commercial Progress Ever Recorded in the Northwest

THE ESCANABA MANUFACTURING COMPANY

THE ESCANABA MANUFACTURING COMPANY, which has become one of the most prominent industrial concerns in the Northwest, is a story of commercial progress and achievement. It is a story of the growth of a small enterprise into a large manufacturing concern, and of the success of a man who has become one of the leading industrialists of the Northwest.

The company was founded in 1892 by J. H. Escanaba, who at that time was a young man of twenty-two years of age. He had just graduated from the University of Michigan, and was looking for a field in which to apply his knowledge. He found it in the manufacture of wooden dishes, and he began to produce them in his home.

His success was rapid, and he soon found that there was a large market for his dishes. He began to produce them in larger quantities, and he soon found that he was able to sell them in all parts of the Northwest. He then began to produce other articles, such as pie plates and clothes pins, and he soon found that these also had a large market.

His success was so great that he was able to expand his business, and he soon found that he was able to produce a large quantity of dishes, pie plates, and clothes pins. He then began to produce other articles, such as wooden boxes and crates, and he soon found that these also had a large market.

LEFT LEG BROKEN BY LOG SLIPPING DOWN A SKIDWAY

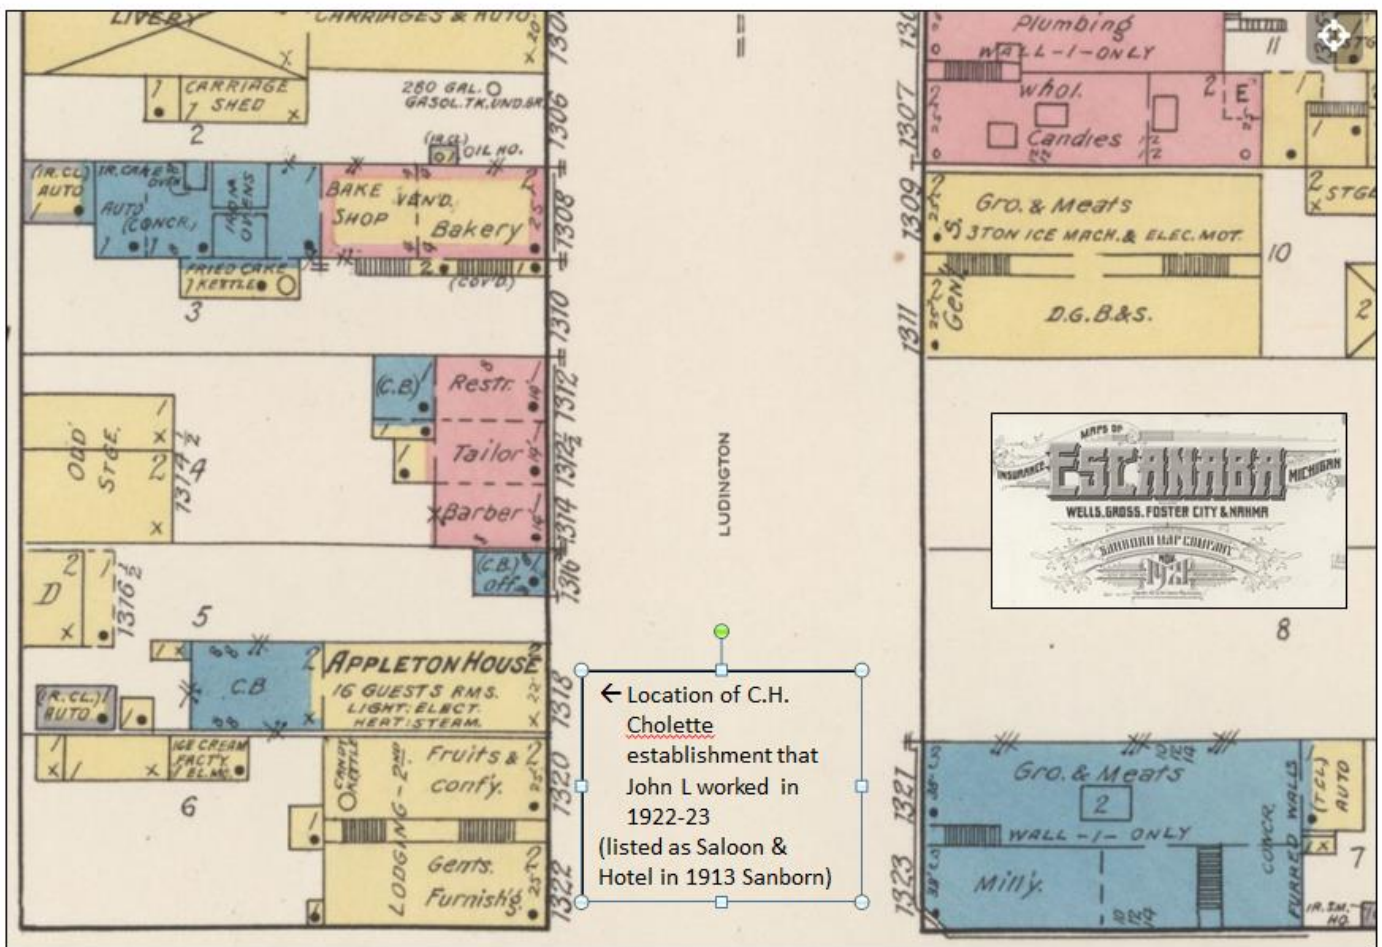

John Lauzon, 52 years of age, residing at 316 Eighteenth street, sustained a fracture of his left leg below the knee while at work at the Escanaba Manufacturing company's plant yesterday afternoon. He was connecting the skidway with the loader when a log slipped in such a manner as to catch the unfortunate man's leg. He was taken to the Laing hospital in Richer's ambulance and the proper surgical attention was rendered.

WAS JOHN A BOOTLEGGER IN 1923-24?

In 1923-24 John worked as a clerk for J.H. (Eli) Cholette [25], who was Marceline's older brother. Joseph Hilaire (Eli) Cholette was listed in the 1905 City Directory as a bartender at a facility run by Irene Marchand (who was shown as operating at the Elk Buffet at 1108 Ludington). We know from US Census records that Eli owned a "soft drink" parlor in 1920 and ran a hotel in 1930. This was during the period of alcohol prohibition, so saloons were not legal. Rather, the names changed to "soft drink parlors." Eli's obit in 1930 said he operated a boarding house for many years in Escanaba. Eli had brushes with the law during this time.

FEDERAL MEN PAY ESCANABA SOCIAL VISIT Eli Cholette, 1320 Ludington Street, Arrested

Floyd Smith, of the federal prohibition office, Marquette, and Deputy U. S. Marshall Tim T. Hurley, of the same city, paid Escanaba a sociable call Thursday. They dropped in on Eli Cholette, 1320 Ludington street and Smith tried to shake hands with Eli. Perhaps because he had a glass with suspicious contents in his hand, Eli didn't want to shake, and the contents of the glass were spilled on the floor, but Eli was arrested anyway. He was arraigned before U. S. Commissioner C. D. McEwen and will have a hearing February 26.

COURT ASSESSES $2900 IN FINES IN COURT HERE

Sixteen Defendants Arraigned for Sentence Yesterday Morning.

Fines totalling $2900 were assessed against law violators by Judge R. C. Finnigan in the Delta county court yesterday morning. One defendant escaped a prison sentence and was allowed to pay a fine only because of the crowded condition of the penal institutions of Michigan, while another defendant was placed on parole for year because of his service to the nation in the World war. When 16 defendants were arraigned before Judge Finnigan for sentence yesterday morning it was done in a crowded courtroom that taxed the judge. As a majority of the defendants were confessed moonshine vendors, the court took occasion to give to that class one of the most scathing lectures ever delivered in this court. Judge Finnigan brought into play, in commenting on conditions that exist, a biting sarcasm such as could not fail to impress every person in the courtroom.

Sentences Imposed.
Followers were the ones imposed by the court upon the defendant arraigned yesterday morning:
Pearl Adams, keeping house of ill fame, $1,000 fine or one year imprisonment at county jail.
Myrtle Dewey, furnishing liquor, paroled for one year.
Palmer Benard, burglary, paroled to sheriff for one year.
Irene Norman, furnishing liquor, paroled to sheriff for one year.
Percy Hubbell, selling liquor, $100 fine $50 costs, or 30 days imprisonment at county jail.
Harry J. Smith, larceny, paroled to Paul Bushong, Gladstone, for one year.
J. H. Cholette, possession liquor, $150 fine $50 costs, or 60 days imprisonment at county jail.

Cholette, Rivets, Cases Dismissed

Marquette, May 17.—(Special.)—Cases against Eli Cholette and James Rivets of Escanaba were charged with resisting a federal officer, were dismissed by Judge Sessions in United States district court today.

Cholette and Rivets ejected two federal officers from the former's place of business in Escanaba several weeks ago. It was contended by the defense that the officers began a search of the premises without making their identity known and that there was no resistance to a search after it was revealed that they were officers.

The defendants were represented by Attorneys H. R. Dotach and N. C. Spencer.

SEVEN LIQUOR RAIDS STAGED

Seven raids conducted last night in Escanaba by federal prohibition operatives, state troopers, members of the Delta county sheriff's staff and the city police department, netted a considerable quantity of moonshine whisky, and smaller amounts of beer and wine.

"Two man buys" in each case formed the basis for search warrants. The raids furnished additional evidence in five of the seven places, and these five will be called upon to answer possession charges as well as charges of sale.

The places raided included:
Joe Peltier, 1223 Ludington street. Three bottles of wine and a small quantity of moonshine found behind the bar.
Oscar Johnson, 1201 Ludington street, four and one-half quarts of moonshine whisky seized.
J. H. Cholette, 1318 Ludington street. Small quantity of moonshine whisky seized.
John Olson, 121 North 10th street. About a half-pint of moonshine taken.

The soft drink parlor at 1014 Ludington street. A drinking glass full of moonshine found behind the bar was confiscated.
Paquin hotel, 1213 Ludington street, Frank Paquin, proprietor. No liquor found during the raid but Paquin will be held on sales charges.

RETURN TO CANADA

In 1924, John left Escanaba. Perhaps the "soft drink" business was getting too hot. Perhaps John felt that working for a relative of his wife wasn't so bad. Regardless, in June, 1924 John sold the house in Escanaba and traveled to Ontario, Canada to work for another brother-in-law, Victor Cholette, in his wholesale grocery business in Ottawa. Victor had never immigrated to the US with the rest of his family and became a successful businessman in Canada.

In June, 1924, John and Marceline sold their house in Escanaba and with $1,480 in his pocket, took the family on the CP railroad and immigrated back to Canada in search of work [19]. The family settled in Hull, Quebec Providence, Canada (on the north side of the Ottawa River, across from Ottawa). The Lauzon family stayed with Marceline's brother, Victor, who ran a relatively wealthy wholesale grocery [4]. [1]

The family spoke French at home. The home was near a dairy. Blanche used to buy her younger sister, Dorothy, ice cream cones for 5 cents each [3]

While living in Canada, the Lauzons were relatively near to the farm of John's parents, Antoine and Delphine Lauzon near Clarence Creek, about 30 miles east. The grandparents were in their 60's at the time. They only visited the Lauzon grandparents once, probably via horse and buggy. [5] The elder Lauzons struck their young grandchildren as being very crabby [4]. Albert got in serious trouble with his grandma, Delphine Lauzon, because he washed a dirty handkerchief in an outside barrel of rainwater, which was also their only source of clean wash water. Grandma got very mad at him. [5]

After a couple of years, John apparently didn't get along with Victor, and the family returned to Escanaba in about 1926.

The Lauzon family didn't stay in Canada very long, only about 18-24 months [1, 4]. John did not get along with his brother-in-law, Victor. [1] The family returned to Escanoba, Michigan where John continued working at the northwestern ore docks [7].

They lived in an apartment referred to after the name of the man who owned it ("No-E-Dose"). [7].

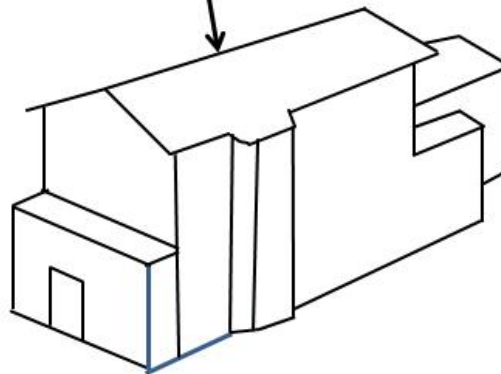

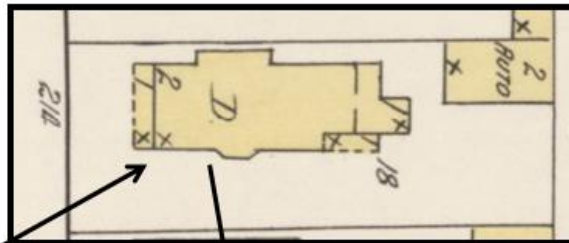

After that, the family bought a home, next to a creamery [9]

Irene was considered the brave girl in the family, not bashful, gutsy and street-smart. She'd be the one to do the running and chasing around when somebody needed something. [7] "We'll send Irene" seemed to be the catch phrase. Irene enjoyed it because she was doing something to help someone [9]. Whenever anyone had the flu in the family, it was always Irene that'd be sent to Uncle Eli's (mother's brother) tavern to bring back some whiskey or brandy [7].

MARCELINE'S LAMENT

It made Marceline sad when some of the kids ran off [9]. It must have been terrible for her in around 1926, when both Joe and Blanche abruptly left home.

Joe may have left when the family still lived in Canada, since there are immigration papers for a 16 yr. old Joseph Lauzon crossing as a student at Port Huron, heading for Chicago. There are no photos of him after the family lived in Hull, Quebec. It was said that Joe joined the Merchant Marines, which was true in the 1940's. However, prior to that he had several run-ins with the law in both Detroit and California.

Barb Wolters recalled that when her family would go up to Racine for Grandma's birthdays she would sit at the head of the table with all those children and grandchildren around her and she would cry. Barb asked her mother why Grandma would cry and my mom said, "because she thinks of the one child who wasn't there or in her life, Joe; and it made her sad" [26].

Blanche eventually married Urban Wolters in Duluth, Minnesota and moved to Texas. Marceline never talked about the kids running off. Joe wrote to her, but the other kids never saw the letters [9].

Please see their stories in chapter #2 and #4 of this book.

JOHN'S JOBS, 1927

The 1927 Escanaba City Directory listed John employed as a "top deck worker" at the local docks. John's daughters later recalled that during the fall and winter their father worked as a lumberjack, being gone from home for months at a time. In the summer, he'd work unloading ships in the Escanaba harbor [1], perhaps ore boats. Ore boats had been visiting Escanaba since the late 1800's and at one time Escanaba was dubbed "the iron port of the world." Over the decades, ore was brought to Escanaba by train from the mines on the Menominee Iron range and the Marquette Iron range. It was the only iron ore port on Lake Michigan, moving raw materials to industry in Chicago and Indiana, and the Midwest.

During 1928 John became displeased with the unsteady and back-breaking work he was doing. John may have gotten the idea of moving from a friend, Mr. Bomana (Bo-me-ah), who lived in Kenosha and may have written to him that there was regular work down in a place called Racine, Wisconsin. There were many more job opportunities in Racine than the ore docks of Escanaba

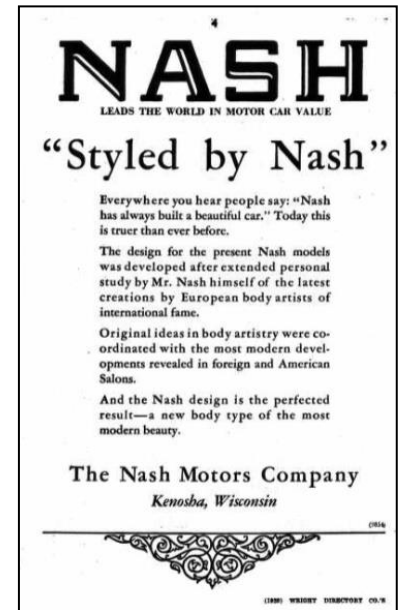

In about 1929, John moved his big family of mostly teenage girls to Racine, Wisconsin.

WORKING FOR NASH

John started working in 1929 for Nash Motors as a "laborer" in the Racine branch of the Kenosha-based auto maker [19].

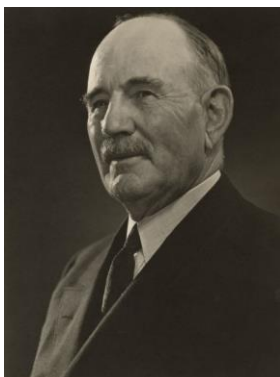

John received job advancements at Nash, and the family moved each time. For a short time the family lived at 1302 Grand in 1931. In 1933 the family lived at 1323 Center Street, per the Racine City Directory of that year. In 1937 they moved to 1801 Grand when John became an assembler at Nash.

Auto Making in Racine

Although Kenosha has always been known as the hometown of Nash cars, at least one line of the company's cars was manufactured in Racine. The company worked out of the old Mitchell & Lewis plant. Henry Mitchell and his son-in-law, William Lewis, started the Mitchell Motor Car Company in 1903. It produced two models of Mitchell cars in Racine. In 1911, Walker Manufacturing merged with the Mitchell & Lewis Motor Car Co. At that time Walker was the largest employer in Racine, with 3,000 employees. Local historians have said Racine's commitment to customer satisfaction is what killed the automotive industry in Racine. Racine's auto manufacturers, among them Mitchell & Lewis, only offered custom made vehicles. Therefore, they had a hard time competing with the nation's assembly-line auto producers. It drove the price of Racine-built cars sky high and eventually led to the demise of automobile manufacturing in the city. The Mitchell & Lewis company went bankrupt in 1923.

Charles Nash acquired the defaulted Mitchell Motor Company in 1923, along with the LaFayette Motors of Milwaukee in 1924, and made vehicles in both locations. Due to labor relation problems, Nash shut down the Racine plant in 1938 and moved the work to its Kenosha factory [7]. Later, Massey-Harris bought the Nash building and started tractor production.

Charles W. Nash, President of Buick, (1910-1912), head of General Motors (1912-1916) and founder of Nash Motors of Kenosha, Wisconsin, a man sometimes referred to as the "great independent" of the automobile manufacturers.

MOVE TO RACINE – ONE JOB, MANY HOUSES

The Lauzon family initially rented a home at 1643 Phillips.

There were no other "Lauzons in the Racine phone book when Albert looked when they moved there. He did find several in the Milwaukee phone book and "he really enjoyed seeing the name, thinking it was pretty special". It wasn't thought that he contacted any of them. [7]

In 1930 the family rented a home for $35/mo. at 1731 Flett Ave.

Over the years, John advanced at his work at Nash Motors. The family moved many times during the 1930's, each time in a different rental.

It was the time of the depression. Labor unrest sometimes made it difficult to pay the rent.

4135 VICTORY AVE

By 1939 the family must have saved enough money to buy a house at 4135 Victory Avenue, Mt Pleasant. The home was located next to the WRJN radio transmitter tower (1400 AM), just outside the south west edge of the City of Racine. It later became part of the City of Racine, Wisconsin. There was a chicken coop in the back.

For 14 years he worked at Nash Motors, Inc. (American Motors Company-AMC) in Kenosha [2] and retired in 1944. The family continued to live at their Victory Ave home until the 1950's.

1940's LIFE IN THE LAUZON HOME

John would call his wife "Marceline" ("Marce-linn") and she'd call him "John Batiste" ("John Batist") [8]. John would encourage his children, "Always look up, and always put your head up" [9]

John was a gruff person. He could be demeaning. John liked to show his authority, saying, "I'm the Boss here!" [6]. as was the way in many older families, John would just sit at the end of the dining room table and be waited on by Marceline. Marceline never talked back to John, even when he was going about yelling, "I'm the boss!" [8]. It was only when he was older and not as strong that she would talk back a little (with the encouragement of her daughters) [8]. Her strength seemed to be stronger when she'd come to the aid of one of the grandchildren that he'd be teasing.

THE OUTHOUSE STORY

When she was a young girl, Barb Wolters would visit her Lauzon grandparents in Racine on an infrequent basis. Barbara recalls, incidents with the outhouse. The Lauzon house on Victory Ave did not have indoor plumbing, so the little house in the back was a necessity. The outhouse was next to the chicken coop. Joan, her older cousin, and Dorothy, her youngest aunt, would lock poor Barb inside the outhouse. There was just a wooden latch on the outside. One time, Barb wanted to get back at them so she tried to lock one of them in. Barb stood outside and watched and watched the door. All of a sudden the "lockee" came up behind her and scared poor Barb out of her wits. Neither Joan or Dorothy, even after they all were grown, would tell Barb how they got out. [3]

POSSIBLE INDIAN HERITAGE

John used to tell his children and grandchildren, "Oh, someone in my family married an Indian squaw." [5]. Marceline, his wife, would respond by telling him to "Keep quiet". [5] Sometimes when Pa would be lying on the bed, after having a few too many, he'd 'sing' Indian-type chants to various tunes [5]. Although not substantiated, the story may be true, since in the early days of French Canadian settlement there were a shortage of women so the men frequently married the native Indian women. The women often took French names so much of the direct history is lost or vague. They had to have some way to "colonize" [5]. While our ancestors were primarily farmers, not fur traders who were more on the edge of civilization, the possibility exists of such a union, though not likely.

HOUSEHOLD CHORES

Marceline would wake before anyone else. She'd be particularly cheerful and happier than at any other part of the day. She enjoyed uncovering her bird "Petie" the first thing in the day. She was even happy when she did another task in the morning. She woke so early to "empty the slops" as it was called. There were bedpans under the beds in case anyone had to eliminate during the night. They did not have indoor plumbing or water connected to the bathroom at that time. So she would empty all the bedpans first thing. Poor Grandma, she did nothing but work hard and pray. Dear soul. [28]

John had a BIG garden on the side of the house. There were always jars of fruit and vegetables that Grandma preserved on shelves in the basement. [3]

Marceline kept a spotless house; she seemed to be always cleaning. That may be where Blanche, Lucille and Evelyn, her oldest daughters, learned the skill [3]. She knew how to sew [6].

Barbara Wolters Reuss remembers Grandma's dishes in her kitchen. The set of dishes was made up of plates with four colors: pink, blue, yellow and light green. When she came from Chicago to visit her grandparents in Racine Barb loved to set the table and get to decide who got which color. She always took blue for herself. [3]

Grandpa raised chickens so they had a chicken coop, next to the outhouse. One Easter, Joan and Barb, the two oldest grandchildren (living in Chicago) got some little yellow chicks for Easter from their parents. The girls had to take the chicks to Racine and put them in the chicken coop. Barb recalled how sad she was to leave her chicken. She didn't eat chicken for years. [3]

RELAXATION

John had a good singing voice and liked to sing [8]. In those days, however, people were so busy working that they never had or took the time to peruse all their personal things [8]. Marceline liked to sing also, but not as frequently or as much. John used to sing some Indian chants (especially when he had 'a buzz on') [7]

John enjoyed sitting in his chair in the living room listening to Dinah Shore on the radio. She was his favorite performer! He wanted everyone to be quiet when Dinah was on so he could hear her! He would yell "Marceline, stop that noise" when she did dishes and banged them a little too much. [3]

The family had a phonograph in the living room, located in a big wooden cabinet. Al, while he was still living at home, would pay his niece, Joan Kittson, a nickel to keep it wound up so he could listen to his records [11]. He also would take her out for ice cream quite a lot. The two of them were pretty good friends [11].

Circa

The family house had a big old Victrola record player in the spare upstairs bedroom.

Dorothy was living at home, and Barbara recalls that one time her Aunt Dorothy played an old scratchy record for her. [3] She had a recording of Bing Crosby's White Christmas. Dorothy would crank up the Victrola and start the song when the Seifert girls went to bed. [29]

Marceline liked to put catsup on most meat [5]. Gammas (?) were her favorite dessert [7]. She loved whipped cream on anything [7]. She didn't have time for hobbies, with ten kids. [6]

John, Marceline & unknowns Circa 1951

DRIVING WAS A "NEW" THING

A family story about the destruction of the garage arose in about 1942-3. One version had Dorothy learning how to drive the car while her father had told her not to. She managed to put it through the garage. [11] The other story had it that Pa was the one who was learning to drive when the garage met its demise [7].

John had worked for Nash but didn't own a car until shortly before he retired in 1944 [8]. He got a good price on it, with his discount. He sold it shortly afterwards, probably feeling he didn't use it enough to get around, and he liked the money he got for it. [8] He didn't want anyone else driving it if he couldn't. [9]

Joe Sieffert used to call them to take them to church. [8]

Marceline was going to learn to drive, but she never did [7]. Marie's boyfriend was going to show her how to drive. "Punk" showed Dorothy how to drive [8] Bernice didn't learn to drive until she got married and had children [7].

JOHN'S TEASING OF JOAN

John was a terrible tease when it came to kids [11]. John would call his granddaughter, Joan Kittson, into the bedroom, "Come here, I want to show you something". When she'd walk in he'd give himself a shot of insulin. Joan would go out crying because she didn't want to see it. Marceline would come to her rescue, "Pa, if you don't leave her alone...Now, you just leave her alone! She'd just a little girl!" And then Joan would say "Yah" [11]

Grandpa would chase Joan. He didn't frighten her, because she was too sassy. She'd also tease him a little bit. She'd tell Grandpa, "You can't hurt me because Grandma will get after you". Grandma stood up for her all the time. Most of the time, however, Grandpa was the instigator. To get out of his way, Joan would run upstairs and lock herself into Bernice's bedroom. Sometimes Bernice was staying there (when Frank was in the service) along with Dorothy. Joan would hide in the closet cubbyhole so Grandpa couldn't find her [11].

In the afternoons, John would sit outside in his favorite wooden chair. He'd select a spot next to the garage in the shade and lean back on its two back legs and take a nap. [11] The memory Joan enjoyed the most to tell about was how one day she saw a spider and took it from its web and placed it on the gardening hat he always wore and it crawled down on his cheek. She woke him to tell him about the spider. He jumped up, yelled and chased her until she ran into the house to Grandma, which caused Grandma to scold Grandpa saying, "Pa leave that child alone!" Joan laughing all the time. Joan recalled, "I was such a brat!" [27]. She liked to get back at him because he teased her so unmercifully. [11]

Grandpa would make Joan cut the hair in his ears. He'd say, "You're going to stay here and do what I tell you!" One time he wanted her to cut the hairs in his nose, but Joan complained to Grandma, saying she didn't want to do that [11]. In later conversations with Barb Wolters Reuss Joan did not have anything good to say about Grandpa, to put it briefly. [27]

Barb Wolters was one of the older grandchildren. She didn't get to know her grandfather very well because she was always a little afraid of him [3]. One time, Barb recalled, how Grandpa pulled her in a wagon to the store. But, he made her stay outside while he went in; she was so scared of being left alone [3].

MARCELINE'S INNER BEAUTY

Marceline was a very religious person. She prayed daily. Barbara Wolters recalled that when Gramma would visit (which wasn't often) and couldn't be found, Barb knew she would find Grandma kneeling next to her bed and praying [14].

Marceline was the peacemaker in the family [8]. Marcelline was a very gracious person [9]. Marceline was a fairly serious person for the most part [8]. She'd look at her kids and say that was her life [8]. She carried a lot inside of her; she didn't show her emotions very much [8]

Marceline had the "patience of a saint" [7]. She almost had to, with her husband, John Batiste, and a number of 'rebel' daughters. They used to tell her, "You wouldn't say 'shit' if you had a mouthful", just to get her reaction. She'd be shocked when they'd say something like that [7]. Actually, the girls were fairly 'straight-laced', which made it all the more funny when it came out [9].

She was an extremely kind person, who never really got mad [9]. She never talked cross about anybody [9]. Whenever any of her girls would complain that she liked her better than me, she'd say, "No, No, I like you all the same. You're all my children." [7].

The color blue was probably Marceline's favorite color. It matched her pretty blue eyes [9]. Barbara Wolters recalls how depressed she knew she was adopted and didn't "fit" in with the Lauzon family, with all their green/brown eyes. Barbara's mother, Blanche, told Barbara that she should consider her close to Gramma Lauzon, since she also had blue eyes. Those made Barbara feel much more comforted. [13].

GATHERINGS AT THE LAUZON HOUSE

In the mid-1940's members of the Lauzon family would get together on the weekends (Sundays) and socialize. Barbara Wolter Reuss recalls how her mother, Blanche, and sister would take the train from Chicago on Friday afternoon for a weekend visit. Her father, Urban, would drive up after work at the Hotpoint Company (thinks it was in Cicero, Illinois) to meet them and stay the weekend. The uncles would come to Grandma and Grandpas and sit outside in their cars and drink beer. If they had Limburger cheese they'd have to eat it out there because Grandma wouldn't let the stinky cheese in the house. [3]

Roman & Evelyn would visit on Sundays during the war years in the early 40's. Evelyn would bring a cake. [7] They'd get a case of beer and have a good time. Dorothy would ride her bike up to "Manns" and buy a couple of half-gallon bottles of Kingsbury beer [8].

Pat Seifert Holub recalled that the Sunday afternoons at Grandma and Grandpa Lauzon's were special. Many of the Lauzon siblings came with their families. The men played cards and the women talked, watched the kids, and made a yummy supper that involved using the wood cook stove as well as the electric range. Grandpa had a big garden and would pull a carrot out, wipe the dirt off, and give it to you for a treat. The house had a nice bathroom but the water line in the street had not been connected to the house. However, they did have a nice three-hole outhouse: small, medium, large, plus a chamber pot for night. [29]

When Mary first met Albert, her first introduction to the family was during one of these regular Sunday gathers at Ma and Pa's house. She recalled that it seemed that every week all the children and their families would congregate. She was amazed at the regularity and size of the group. [10] They'd all do the dishes and afterwards talk. [7]

Marceline-Reading the Paper, Circa 1953

After a while the regular family gathers got to be too much and they grew less frequent.

Grandma loved going on picnics, not so much because of the outside environment as it was all the family that would get together. Similarly she likes to go out to eat with the family. [18]

DIABETIS

John would have a big bowl of oatmeal in the morning, every day of the year, and heap on the sugar. He never liked milk. Sometimes he'd put butter on his oatmeal [5]. After he learned he had diabetes; he'd put four saccharin tablets on it. Marceline would say, "Pa, you shouldn't put so much in" But, he'd just say, "Leave me alone!" [11]

John suffered from diabetes, just like he believed his father to have. [5]

TRAVEL & VISITS

John and Marceline didn't travel very much, except up to Escanoba and Iron Mountain to visit their family [8]. Later, John would go up more often, mostly by himself. His daughters would drive him to the train station [8]. His legs were better than his wife (before one got amputated). He liked to walk and she couldn't walk that much [7]. After all, after having ten kids you're not going to want to walk so much [7].

Bev (Lauzon) Calkins recalled when she visited her grandparents how much Grandma's hand would shake when she poured coffee into Grandpa's shaking cup and saucer he would hold. "They never spilled a drop" [17]. She remembered how Grandpa would sit on his back porch and take his cane and rap on his wooded leg to scare Bev and her sister, Linn. [17].

RETIREMENT

John started working for Nash Motors in Racine in about 1929. When the factory was shut down and work was transferred to Kenosha in 1938, John followed. From 1942 to 1945, Nash Motors made aircraft engines in Kenosha for the U.S. military in World War II.

John retired from Nash Motors in 1944 after working there for about 14 years [2]. He was a member of St. Joseph's Church, the Holy Name Society and Catholic Order of Foresters.

MILWAUKEE HOME (FOR A SHORT TIME)

The 1952 Racine City Directory did not show John & Marceline living in the community, but the Milwaukee Directory listed them living in Milwaukee with their daughter, Dorothy. This may have been for a short time, because in April, 1952, Dorothy married Len Lewandowski and most likely the Lauzon parents moved out.

BACK TO RACINE

By 1954, Dorothy was married and John and Marceline were shown in the City Directory as living back in Racine. They rented the 1st floor rear apartment at 1816 N Chatham. Other tenants included Clifton DeFer and Joseph Stetka. The home was right next door to that of Roy & Marie Scoggins. Their granddaughter, Betty Ann, thought it was a blessing having them living next to her [30].

1956 – 50th ANNIVERSARY

On Jan 6, 1956 John and Marceline's family celebrated 50 years of their marriage by renting a bar and having a large celebration. Barb Wolters remembered that Grandpa got sick at the 50th anniversary dinner and never did get well from that day on. [6] Shortly thereafter he died.

MARCELINE RESIDENCES

After 1956, Marceline lived with her various daughters. Most frequently, from 1965 to 1970 she lived with Evelyn and Roman Spielbauer in Cudahy at 4549 S. Packard Ave [12]. Susan Murray recalled how Grandma spent a lot of time with her favorite great-grandson, Christopher, reading and praying. He'd want to sit next to her at meals whenever the Murrays would visit. She gave him pink mints, which he loved. [20]

Marceline also lived with her other children at times. She spent a lot of time at the Lewandowski home.
