Couple Goes To Dells After Rites

Miss Irene Lauzon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lauzon of 4135 Victory avenue, pronounced the vows on Saturday morning which made her the bride of Joseph W. Seifert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Seifert, 2100 Carmel avenue.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. John Schneider at 9 a. m. at Holy Name church which was decorated with spring flowers. Ice blue chiffon was the choice of the bride for her wedding gown which fell to a full skirt from a full bodice.

Carries Roses.

She carried a bouquet of white roses, sweetpeas and lilies of the valley. Her fingertip veil matched her gown and a cluster of lilies of the valley trimmed her blue headpiece.

Miss Johanna Van Bogart, as maid of honor, was frocked in peach chiffon with a full skirt and a sweetheart neckline. Her headpiece held a large bow from which fell long streamers. Her flowers were yellow roses and sweetpeas.

Best man was Gene Fox and Albert Lauzon, brother of the bride, ushered. Music was sung by the Holy Name children's choir. Breakfast was served at Hotel Nelson after the ceremony and 50 guests congratulated the young couple at the home of the bride's parents during the afternoon.

Trip to Dells.

The newlyweds will spend a week at Wisconsin Dells before they return to make their home at 2826 Gillen street. Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. R. Speilbauer, Cudahy; Mr. and Mrs. R. Kittson with Joan, Milwaukee; Mr. and Mrs. U. C. Walters, Chicago; Yvonne M. Lauzon, Milwaukee.

Showers honoring the bride before her marriage were given by Alice Morrisch and Lola Hanson; Mrs. Marie Wills, Johanna Van Bogart; and Bernice and Marie Lauzon.

World War II & Joe's Work

In 1940 he worked as a clerk in Sturevant, Wisconsin at the Albert Jensen Grocery Store. He worked his way up to being a meat cutter.

In 1940, prior to U.S. entry into World War II, the first peacetime draft in the nation's history was enacted in response to increased world tension. Joe's August 1940, draft registration card showed him to be 5'-8" tall, weighing 140 pounds, with light complexion, blue eyes, and brown hair.

Renee recalled that her Mother told the kids that during the war all the relatives would come to the store

The Early Seifert Family

Suzanne Seifert was born on Feb 23, 1940. Suzanne was a very beautiful and healthy baby, says her proud mom.

Two more girls, Pat and Gail, were added to the Seifert family in 1942 and 1943.

Aunt Bernice and Uncle Frank Jozwik visited when he came home from active duty. He sat Pat on his lap and taught her to say “the sco is foty fo to fo” because Pat talked with a southern accent. Pat also vaguely remembered sitting on his lap and having an accident and wetting his uniform, which was prickly wool. [14]

LIFE ON CARMAL AVE

Joe’s father and mother lived at 2100 Carmel Avenue in Racine when his mother died in late January, 1940. Joe and Irene moved in with Frank so he wouldn’t be alone. At the time Frank worked as a janitor at Walker Manufacturing [10].

Pat Seifert Holub recalled that her first memories were of living on Carmel Avenue, where her Mother and Daddy lived with Grandpa Frank Seifert in his little house. There were 8 people living in a little house, but they had a lot of good times. Grandpa had one bedroom, Joe and Irene had the other. At night Renee and Roberta both slept in the same crib, while Sue, Gail and Pat slept on a roll-away bed that was stored in the bedroom and moved into the living room at bedtime. That didn’t interfere with anyone watching TV at night because they didn’t have one. Instead, they listened to The Lone Ranger on the radio. [14]

Joe continued to work at the Jensen Grocery Store in Sturevant throughout the 1940s as a meat cutter.

One Sunday afternoon the 3 older Seifert girls were playing outside and got into their Daddy’s car, which was an older pre-war model that had the coolest big fabric pockets the in the back doors. They pretended they were driving and somehow the emergency brake got released. The car started rolling backward on the street that sloped all the way to a big hill by Holy Communion Church. The girls rushed into the house to tell him what happen and he ran out, hopped in while the car was rolling, and managed to stop it. Pat didn't remember what their punishment was, but they certainly never did that again. [14]

Irene, with Sue, Gail & Pat, Circa 1946

The family was a member of St. John Nepomuk Catholic Church and Irene was active in Christian Ladies. [6]

On Carmel Avenue milk was delivered by a horse and wagon and they always hoped the horse wouldn't poop in front of our house.[14]

While living on Carmel Avenue, Grandpa bought Irene an ironing mangle for Christmas. It was a deluxe sit-down model and she became a pro using it. At that time the family did not have a clothes dryer to fluff things up after going through the wringer washer. There wasn't any wash and wear clothing back then; only white dress shirts and little girls dresses with ruffles. She even ironed the sheets and underwear. At least Irene could sit down while ironing her heart away. [14]

Grandpa Frank had a huge concord grape vine and a huge pear tree in the back yard. In summer they picked grapes and made grape jelly, sealing the jars with melted paraffin wax. In the fall they picked pears using equipment that Grandpa designed to reach the top branches. It was a long clothes pole with an empty tin can attached at the top. All you did was put it up under a pear, gave it a twist, and try to keep it in the can on the way down. If the pears were not ripe yet, they had to wrap them individually in newspaper and store them in boxes in the garage until late October. Pat thought that the garage was originally a stable because it still had a dirt floor. The pears came out at Halloween and were used for treats. The kids ate their fill, and their mother canned them. All the canning went in the fruit cellar in the basement, which also had an octopus furnace and a dirt floor. [14]

Irene at Parent's 40th Anniversary, 1946

Grandpa Frank had grown up in Austria and had beautiful continental manners, such as how he held his fork in his left hand and knife in his right hand. He ate peas with his knife, which fascinated the children. [14]

At Christmas time he would teach the Seifert girls to sing “O Christmas Tree” in German, O Tannenbaum. [14]

Michael Spielbauer, Gail, Pat & Sue, Circa 1947

One place the Seifert girls liked to go in summer was the “witch’s house” down the hill behind their house. It was a really big brick house in the woods with a tall turret feature in the front. It was always dark around it and scary for the girls. Finding it was easy because of the tall turret; but, getting home was not as easy because there was no landmark at the top of the hill. So the girls would just kept going through the woods up the hill until they found a backyard that looked familiar, and then worked their way home. Pat noted that in 2020, the big brick house was still there on Spring Street, east of the hospital. [14]

And More Girls

In 1947, there was another pregnancy. It must have been a real shock for two more girls to come. The twins thought their father had a boys name all picked out [3].

A few weeks after the twins were born in 1947, Joe came home from work sick. The doctor came and diagnosed him with Chicken Pox, which was going around at that time. So the entire family was quarantined with a sign on the door. All in the family got the pox, except the twins and Grandpa Seifert. Thankfully, some of Irene's sisters came and helped with everything. [14]

The family was now complete. One male living with 5 females.

Irene & Tim Schmidling, 1947

Linden Avenue in the 50s

The Seifert family continued to live on Carmel Street from about the time that Joe's mother died in 1940, until they moved to 1705 Linden Avenue in about 1950. Grandpa Frank Seifert moved along too. [14] The Seiferts moved when Roberta and Renee were little. [15]

They lived there for many years.

Joe with a moment to relax, Circa 1950

Across the street from their home was that of Irene's sister, Marie Lauzon Scoggins. The Seifert twins and Bette Anne Scoggins formed the "three musketeers" as kids [2]. Bette couldn't properly say their names, Roberta and Renee. It came out as "Birdie" and "Nay-nay" and it stuck. [3]

Gail, Pat, Renee, Roberta, Sue & Irene, 1948

The Linden Avenue house had a two-car garage off the alley, where the kids played kick the can, tennis, badminton, catch. That meant they had lots of room to play on rainy days when their Daddy took the car to work. In summer the girls often went to the playground at Howell

School for their planned activities. The Doll Buggy parade on the evening before the Fourth of July was a favorite along with the Lantern Parade.

It was always crazy at the Seifert house because there was only one bathroom and 5 girls. Poor Joe was totally outnumbered, but always had first dibs on the bathroom. They even had a girl dog. [15]

Tom Jozwik recalled that one day in the early 1950s his family traveled to Racine to visit the Seifert home, but then they arrive something was strangely wrong. With 5 girls and a dog named "Debbie" there was usually a lot of noise at the house, but this time, relative silence. They found that only Grandpa Frank Seifert was the only one home. He explained that the whole family was gone, and that he was, frankly, pretty lonely. So he turned on the radio and cranked it up to full volume, and even turned on the record player. He said all the noise was the next best thing to the sounds of family. [17]

The house was just a couple blocks from the Washington Park swimming pool, so the girls often went there. Monday, Wednesday and Friday mornings were free, so that was great for them. [14]

The Morrison family lived next door and Mary was a dare devil. She must have gotten that from her father, Rocky, who would take the neighborhood kids on a joy ride in his old jeep, which didn't have any doors. Mary also taught the Seifert girls how to catch rides on the back of a Progressive Dairy truck, getting on and off when it stopped for deliveries. [14]

The home on Linden Street, Tom Jozwik recalled was the 2nd house from the corner. It was next to the guy with all sorts of cars, and battled loudly with his wife about all sorts of thing. The Seifert house seemed comfortable to Tom, almost like a second home. He was sure it was because Irene and Joe preached the old Polish proverb (although they weren't Polish), "Guest in the Home, God in the Home; Treat Your Visitors As You'd Treat Him. Tom couldn't ask for a hostess with a better philosophy.[17].

Renee & Roberta on the hammock. Circa 1949

Irene used to make Grandpa Seifert oatmeal with salt, pepper and butter every morning for breakfast. He used to walk us "down the hill" to the grocery store and give us 10 cents to buy penny candy. [15]

The Seifert's bought their first TV when they lived on Linden Avenue. The family loved it. Their favorite programs were Milton Berle, The Show of Shows on Saturday night, Dragnet, and Howdy Doody. Joe liked to watch boxing and wrestling. The teenage girls loved American Bandstand with Dick Clark. [14]

In the evenings before Christmas the family sat around the radio and listened to "Billie the Brownie" who told the kids to be good so Santa would come to their house. One year Gail and Pat got brand new bicycles, mint green and wonderful. The aunts and uncles came over and all took turns teaching the girls how to ride. [14]

Renee

Roberta, Circa 1950

On the Fourth of July many Lauzon family members came over to watch the fireworks since the Seiferts lived near Washington Park where they were shot off. The Fourth of July parades were the absolute best. The family had wonderful picnics at the Racine Zoo, Sanders Park, and Pierce Woods, where the new SCJ Sports Complex later would be located. [14] When the Seifert girls were little, all the Milwaukee families came and spent the night and went to the Racine parade. The parents had the bedrooms and all of us kids slept on the floor in the living room on sheets. [15]

Irene, Circa 1952

A favorite summer treat while living

7-11

Back: Sue & Gail; Front: Roberta & Renee, Circa 1950

there was having Black Cows, now known as Root Beer Floats. No one kept ice cream at home then, so the family walked over to the A&W Root Beer stand for a half gallon of root beer, then a block and a half down the hill to an ice cream shop for that, then home for the best treats. On Sundays they also walked Uptown to a little stand with the best popcorn and each girl had their own bag. [14]

Irene taught her nephew, Tom Jozwik, a very important lesson, how to tie his shoes. He told him that he couldn't go outside to play until he tied his shoes. Tom recalled that he learned pretty quick after that lesson [17].

The twins always got up early to walk or roller skate over to the A&W root beer stand, where Sue worked as a car hop, to look for the change that was dropped on the ground around the cars the previous night. [15]

Renee recalled that her parents only went on one vacation when she was little. They went to Wild Rose, Wisconsin, and took Sue, Pat and Gail with them. Bertie and Renee stayed with someone in the family. Her parents brought them back cowgirl outfits.

School Days

The girls walked every day from their home on Carmel Avenue to the Jefferson Grade School on West Sixth Street. Every morning their mom would braid their hair. Everyone wore dresses. For the first day of school they got new dresses, matching ones for Gail and Pat, which were saved for Renee and Roberta, so the twins could have matching dresses when the grew into them. [14]

The school had an old-fashioned slide fire escape that spiraled down from the second and third floors. When there was a fire drill the children got to go down that fire escape, around and around, sitting on a piece of paper. If your paper slipped out you ended up with metal stains on your dress or undies, but it still was a thrill. [14]

In sixth grade Gail and Pat started going to St. Edwards School. Sue may have started there the year before. It was a one-mile walk from their home on Linden. They walked west on 12th Street, which took them past the woods near the Washington Park golf course. They always went as fast as they could along that stretch to avoid the hobos that they had been told had lived there. Pat recalled that she was pupil #51 in a single room of sixth graders, with one teacher all day, Sister Ursula. That school was ahead of the public schools in curriculum, so Pat had some catching up to do, including learning to diagram sentences. She said you didn't dare misbehave or you got a long division or multiplication problem with about 10 numbers each way. [14]

Sue remembers her Mom instructing the girls to say, "You can't make me do that, I'm Catholic." [18]

Going to St. Catherine's High School involved walking a mile east on 12th Street from Linden Avenue. It wasn't too bad a walk, if it wasn't cold or rainy, and you didn't have to wait for a train that sometimes blocked the path at the top of the 12th Street hill, near Racine Street. [14]

Unknown Seifert, Circa 19xx

At the Beach

For picnics at Lake Michigan the watermelon was put in the lake so it would stay cold. Sometimes in summer the water would be only 60°, but the Seifert girls still went into the water. The Racine North Beach was rated as one of the best in the country. [14]

The Twins, Circa 1960

One afternoon when Daddy had off work we packed up a picnic and fishing poles and headed to Zoo Beach. While we played in the sand and water, Daddy went out on the jetties and fished after taking off his shoes and socks and rolling up his pants, no men wore shorts then. It was a great time and he caught some perch. However, his feet also got sunburned, so badly that he could hardly get his shoes on the next day. [14]

Irene, Circa 1958

Family Visits

We didn't get to see the Chicago families much, it was so far. [14]
And going to Auntie Yvonne and Uncle Bob's on Auer Avenue in Milwaukee was far also. [14]
At one time, Irene was the heart of the extended Lauzon family ... she was the one who planned the picnics, Sunday suppers and all sorts of parties. Irene's parties were always lots of fun. They were Irene's hospitality at work [17]. Jim Lewandowski, a nephew, recalled that it was always a joy to spend time at Aunt Irene's house or any of the family picnics.

TOURTIERE MEAT PIE TRADITION

Meat pie is a traditional Lauzon dish and was always served at the Seifert house on Christmas Eve and for other special occasions. Growing up, Tourtiere was our traditional Christmas Eve and special occasion supper. This is a French Canadian dish that is still made and served throughout Canada. Mother and all her sisters learned to make this dish from their mother, and her mother before her. For the Seifert sisters, meat pie has always meant home and family. As we all grew up and moved away, we could always count on mother making meat pie when we came together for special celebrations. There was nothing better than smell of meat pies cooking as you walked in the door. As mother and her sisters grew older and passed away, we continued the tradition. This dish truly means family to all of us. The receipt was included in the Lauzon Family Cookbook that was assembled for the 1985? Family Picnic [15]

Tortiere (French Meat Pie)

3 lb. ground beef	1 tbsp. poultry seasoning
2 lb. ground pork	1 tsp. celery salt
4 medium onions, finely chopped	1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. sage	1 tsp. pepper

Mix all ingredients and put in a large dutch oven. Cover with water. Simmer 2-3 hours (water will cook down). Use 3 large or 4 medium pie crusts. Fill crusts with meat using a slotted spoon to slightly drain meat. I usually add an additional approx. 1/3 cup of liquid to pie crust after I have filled them. Sprinkle top of pie with 1 tbsp. flour, and cover with top crust. Bake at 400 degrees for approx. 1 hour.

I use 3 pkgs. Pillsbury refrigerated crusts and 3-9" pie pans. Freezes well. Reheat thawed pies in oven, uncovered, at 300 degrees for approximately 1 hour.

Meat pie is a traditional Lauzon dish and was always served at the Seifert house on Christmas Eve and for other special occasions. Aunt Bernice sent Renee Bartz her recipe years ago and she have adapted it slightly.

SEIFERT FOOD MARKET

Joe operated the Seifert's Food Market grocery store in Sturtevant from 1952 to 1964, while the family lived in Racine. He was a member of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters Union [1].

Seifert's Grocery and Filling Station, shown at an unknown date, was located in Sturtevant. At the time of its incorporation as a village, Sturtevant had 182 registered voters.

From Racine Journal Times,
Sturtevant: 100 Year Anniversary, Village marks a humble start

Joe had a store stamp that he marked the receipts for his customers. He would buy blank receipt books and have his kids stamp all the pages. He kept his receipts and this stamp in an old cigar box. Renee kept the original stamp and cigar box. [15]

HARD LABOR for 90 days in the County Jail was ordered for Paul Robert Smithkey, 24; of 1608 W. 6th St. after he pleaded guilty in Municipal Court today to a charge of criminal trespassing. Sheriff's deputies said Smithkey entered the Seifert Food Store in Sturtevant on two occasions in 1958, and took various items including flashlights, cartons of cigarets and small change.

Barbara Wolters recalled that she and her parents did not visit up in Wisconsin very often through her lifetime. She remembered, however, some things she got to do when there, such as going to Seifert's to play for a few hours and when the kids went to Uncle Joe's grocery store. He let us each have a can of soda, something that was very rare for the Wolters girls. When the cans were just about empty the girls tipped them over each other's heads and let the drops of soda fall into their hair. Aunt Irene was not Happy. Imagine that. There was a lot of hair shampooing that evening [13]

Joe closed his store after a fire in 1963 caused damage and some merchandise was lost [16].

The family became members of St. Edwards Catholic Church [1]. Irene joined the St. Edward Harmony Club. The family belonged to St. Edward's church in West Racine; all five of the girls were married there. [16]

For many years Irene volunteered at St. Catherine's High School and Siena Center. [6]

FAMILY LIFE IN THE 60'S

In the summer of 1961 the Seifert family moved from their Linden Street home to a house at 1418 Cleveland Ave.[1] They moved during the summer before Roberta and Renee started high school at St. Catherine's [15]

THE 1970'S

Joe Seifert died on December 13, 1970 at his home after a long illness. He was 56 years old at the time [1]. Irene lost both her mother and husband in the same year. Joe died from a heart condition. He was buried at Holy Cross Catholic Cemetery.

Seifert Ancestors

It has been difficult tracing the ancestors of the Seifert family, especially on the paternal side. This is because, as of 2021, much of the ancestral documents of Austria have not been digitized and made available on-line. We are fortunate that genealogical research of Joseph Seifert's mother, Anna Freiwald, has been uploaded.

(Joseph Seifert's Parents)

When Frank Seifert retired in the 1957 he had risen to be the head of the Custodian Department at the Walker Manufacturing Plant, in Racine. He worked his way up from starting as an entry level janitor in 1921. It was a big change from the young man that immigrated by himself at the turn of the century.

Franz Joseph Seifert was born on February 13, 1880 in Austria. He was the son of Joseph and Mary Seifert. We only know this because of documents that originate from Robert Seifert, Franz's brother. More on Robert later.

Frank indicated he was born in Silesia, Austria, a Bohemian area that was long ago part of the Holy Roman Empire, It became a part of the Austrian Empire and Austro-Hungarian Empire until the Empire was dissolved in 1918 at the end of World War I. The western portion is currently in the Czech Republic and eastern portion in Poland.

Franz Seifert came to America on this ship. It was constructed in 1897 to compete with the British trans-Atlantic passenger business; it was considered one of the 1st modern super ocean liners and the 1st to have 4 stacks; it held the record for the fastest trans-Atlantic voyage; It broadcast the 1st ship-to-shore wireless message in 1900; The ship was converted to a military cruiser at the start of WWI; it destroyed several British ships before being sunk in Aug 2014 in NW Africa in the Battle of Rio de Oro.

Robert gave a more precise indication of where he was born: Oberthomasdorf, located near Freiwaldau in Silesia, Austria. Over time, the German name of "Freiwaldau" became the Czech name of "Fryvaldov" and in 1947 changed to "Jesenrk".

We don't know the precise reason that Franz emigrated to America in late 1904, but it may have been the political, economic, or military turmoil in Austria.

Anna Freiwald was born in 1878 and grew up in the same community as Franz, which she listed as near Frewaldau. Her surname may have been derived from the location of her birth. It is probable that they knew each other in Silesia and may have been engaged before Franz traveled to America. This theory is support by the way both Franz and Anna immigrated to the US. Franz and Anna may have planned to start a new life in the new world, with Franz going ahead of time to find a home.

Franz may have immigrated at the urging of his older brother, Robert, who came a year earlier (see his story in the inset below).

Franz traveled alone, as a 24 year old laborer, and with only $10 in his pocket. He traveled on the famous 7-year old German ship, the SS Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. The 1904 passenger list showed that Franz was headed for Portland Hills, near Ridgway, in Elk County, Pennsylvania, where his brother, Robert, lived at the time. We don't know if Franz actually arrived in Portland Hills, but we do know that in 1905, Franz had changed his name to Frank and lived in Wheeling, West Virginia. He worked as a porter, and later as a bartender, at the Louis Knierim Saloon & Restaurant located at 1531 Market Street. He also lived in the same building.

After Frank settled down he must have written to Anna Freiwald back in Austria to tell her to start her journey to America. She had worked in Austria as a servant. Family story said that she worked for a well to do family [xx]. By June 14, 1905, about 6 months after Frank's arrival in America, Anna landed in New York and was ready to continue the overland portion of her trip to Wheeling, West Virginia. The ship passenger log confirmed Frank's exact address of where she was headed and that Frank had paid for her ticket.

Soon after her arrival, Frank Seifert and Anna Freiwald were married in Ohio County of West Virginia. We assume in Wheeling. While living in Wheeling two boys were born into the Seifert family, Frank Jr and Charles.

There were several other Seifert families that lived in Wheeling at the same time as Frank, but we have not yet been able to confirm their relationship. This included Joseph A, Joseph E Seifert, and Andrew Seifert. These persons had immigrated in the 1870-90 time-frame and established themselves in Wheeling. They may have been kin to Frank who but nothing has been confirmed after researching each person back several generations. They didn't live near Frank. This group of Seiferts came from Germany rather than Austria and are not thought to have been closely related to Frank Sr.

WOMAN BOUND TO A STOVE

DARING ATTEMPT AT BURGLARY IS MADE IN SOUTH SIDE HOME—SCREAMS BRING ASSISTANCE

Wheeling, W. Va., Feb. 8.—One of the most horrifying attempts at robbery ever heard of in Wheeling was made on the South Side last evening. Three men entered the home of Mrs. Frank Seifert, at 3184 alley H. and after binding and gagging her, they ransacked the house without securing anything of value. The woman was treated in the most brutal manner possible by the men, who succeeded in making their escape. The police are now on their trail, but so far have made no capture.

According to the story told the police, the three men entered the Seifert home last evening about eight o'clock, and before Mrs. Seifert had time to scream or cry for assistance she found herself bound to a heating stove in her living room. A lump of coal as large as an ordinary man's fist was fastened in her mouth, and her hands and feet were firmly tied to the stove. The burglars soon went through the house and then departed, leaving her tied to the stove and suffering terrible agony from the heat. Fortunately she was not burned.

After remaining in this position nearly two hours, Mrs. Seifert managed to get the lump of coal out of her mouth. She screamed and her cries attracted Mrs. Jack, a neighbor, who notified Rudolph Brandt, night watchman at Schaubach's brewery. Mr. Brandt cut the woman loose and then notified the police.

Meanwhile the would be robbers had escaped without finding $15 which Mrs. Seifert had stowed away in her home.

The police are handicapped in their search for the men by the fact that Mrs. Seifert could give no description of them. The only thing she remembered concerning the men was that one was a German and spoke broken English.

Independent-Herald (Hinton, West Virginia) • 10 Feb 1910, Thu

In 1911 Frank's family moved to a home at 421 Coal Street. Around 1913 Louis Knierim retired and he may have closed the business because it was no longer listed in the Wheeling City Directory.

Facing unemployment, and perhaps Anna's safety concerns over her robbery incident, convinced Frank Sr to move his family westward in 1914 to Racine, Wisconsin. We do not know why the family selected Racine to live. There were no other Seifert or Freiwald families that lived in Racine at the time.

Two more children were added to the Seifert family while they lived north of Racine. Joseph was born in 1914 and Frieda in 1916

In Racine, Frank Sr continued to work at his profession as a bartender at J. F. Borsh Saloon, which was located at 406 6th Street. The Seifert family lived in rural Racine at RFD 2. This rural delivery route was north of Rapids Drive up to 7 Mile Road and west of the Root River.

The family lived at RFD 2 until 1918, when they moved to 2044 Carmel Avenue.

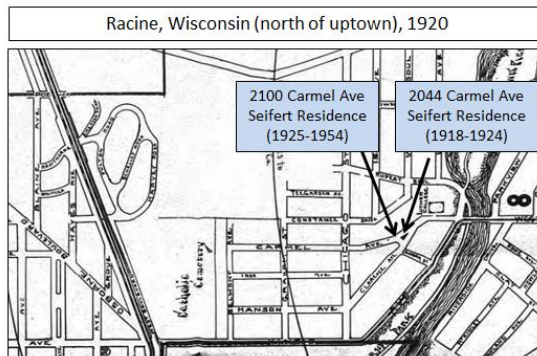

In 1920 the US Constitution was amended to prohibit the sale of all alcoholic beverages. The Borsh bar closed and Frank's livelihood as a bartender ended. He needed to find a new job.

EARLY HISTORY OF WALKER MFG

Walker Manufacturing started as a 4 person company named "Economy Spring" that made springs for horse-drawn farm wagons. The company introduced a successful new harrow attachment for plows (for breaking up dirt, rooting up weeds, or covering seeds) so the company hired an additional 36 workers. At the turn of the century Economy Spring was thriving as a non-automotive company. In 1908, William A. Walker, along with his twin sons, Willard and Warren, gained controlling interest in Economy Spring. In 1912 Willard Walker decided to design and produce a "tire saver" to hold stored automobiles up off their narrow tires during the winter, since few were driven because of snow and ice. The "tire saver" later became better known as a "jack." By 1916 Walkers' jack factory employed 400 workers, and the flourishing company's name was officially changed from Economy Spring to Walker Manufacturing. In 1929 the company bought Ajax Auto Parts and became one of the nation's largest jack manufacturers.

During the depression, Walker diversified into other automobile accessories, including a "silencer" to reduce back-pressure and bring exhaust noise to a minimum. Walker's silencer had a louvered or ventilated tube that churned exhaust fumes in one direction within the silencer to lower back-pressure on the engine and muffled the auto's noise. It became known as a "muffler." The louvered muffler put Walker Manufacturing in the forefront of exhaust system, where it remained to the present day.

child. He worked as a butcher in a meat market. This may have been the incentive for his younger brother, Joe, to also become a butcher. Soon, Frank Jr and Clara had a family of two children, Anna in 1931 and Frank III in 1937.

In 1920, Frank Sr started to work as a janitor at Walker Manufacturing, which gave him steady employment for the next 35

In 1925, the Seifert family moved next door to a larger house at 2100 Carmel.

Anne was born Aug. 1, 1931, to parents, Frank and Clara Seifert. Anne grew up in Lake Geneva, and settled in Sharon WI, with her husband. Anne graduated in 1950, from Lake Geneva High School, worked at Lakeland Hospital as an LPN, where all her children were born. While raising her family she continued to work in the field of health and respite care. Anne was admired by many friends and family and will be greatly missed. She was a selfless, kind, sweet, hardworking, compassionate and sometimes mischievous person who lived to make the people in her life happy. She always desired a big family and relished time with her children and grandchildren. She found great joy in the company of her tight-knit family and reminded her children regularly how important it was to have and nurture one another. Anne went to great lengths to spend equal time with everyone. The fondest memories were family gatherings when everyone crowded together to celebrate countless holidays, birthdays, anniversaries and family vacations, which carried her to many destinations, both domestic and abroad. She was especially fascinated with the people and culture of Germany, which was home to her grandparents. Anne took great interest in the art of painting; her family travels provided interesting subjects and sceneries for her painting passion. She had a zest for life and never passed up an opportunity to share new experiences with her family. She is now in the company of angels and will forever be on our mind and in our hearts. Surviving are her husband; her brother and his wife; her sister-in-law; her nine children; 18 grandchildren; five great-grandchildren; and many nieces and nephews. Robert Seifert (Frank's Brother)

Frank had an older brother, Robert; but, nothing else is known about the parents or their family. Robert reported that he was born in April, 1878 in "Oberthomascot By Frialdam", Austria. From Robert's records we learned his mother and father's given names.

Robert was the first to come to the USA. In December 1903, he traveled across the Atlantic, landed in New York City, and traveled overland to settle in Portland Mills, a small community southwest of Ridgway, Pennsylvania.

In 1907, Robert married Josephine Majirsky in Tucker, West Virginia. The two raised 2 children while they lived in West Virginia, first in Tucker and then in Wheeling. William was born in 1907, and Josephine in 1909.

The 1910 US Census recorded that Robert and his family lived in the Black Fork district in the town of Hambleton, in Tucker County of West Virginia. Robert worked as a laborer in the tanning industry.

	William ("Willie") George Seifert 1907–1992
	Josephine Seifert (Wis- senback, Burgholzer) 1909–1994

However, the 1910 US Census taken in Elkland, Pennsylvania also listed a Robert Seifert that lived in a boarding house. Elkland was about 280 miles northeast of Tucker County, West Virginia.

This may not be "our" Robert Seifert, although both were the same age, both married in 1907, both worked in the tanning industry, both from Austria. But, both census' were taken in the same month of 1910. Is this a huge coincidence? Or, was the same person counted twice in two locations? The mystery remains.

Robert filed the second naturalization document in April, 1913, after he moved to Idaho. In it Robert recorded that he had lived in Wheeling WV from January 1907 to March 1911, although the US Census showed otherwise.

Robert suffered a gruesome death in June, 1930. Apparently, while he was on a fishing trip he hopped onto a Milwaukee Road freight train, but slipped off and was run over by the train. His decapitated head and body was found several hours later.

Funeral Thursday.
Funeral services for Robert Seifert, 53, will be held Thursday morning from Mitchell parlors, Rev. Gornall officiating. Mr. Seifert was killed Sunday by a freight train, six miles southeast of St. Maries. He is survived by his widow, Josephine, four sons, William, Frank, Carl and James of St. Maries, and two daughters, Josephine and Margaret.

FREIGHT TRAIN CUTS MAN IN TWO

St. Maries Railway Worker Run Over by Elk River Freight.

NONE SAW ACCIDENT

Had Been Fishing and Is Identified by Fishing License.

ST. MARIES, Idaho, June 23.—Robert Seifert, 52, carpenter of the Milwaukee railway here, was run over and instantly killed six miles southeast of here by a freight train on the Milwaukee's Elk River branch this afternoon. His body was cut in two, and his head was found almost 300 yards away. Identification was made by a fishing license discovered in a pocket of the clothing.

None of the train crew saw the accident, nor knew that he was on the train, and it was thought that he had fallen beneath the train either in attempting to climb aboard, or after he had been riding a short distance. Although there were tramps stealing rides on the train, according to the train crew, there was no way of determining whether he had been pushed off.

The body was not discovered until about two hours after the train had passed the spot, when DeVern Lewis and John Mottern, walking along the right of way to their cabin on the river near by, made the gruesome discovery. They notified the sheriff's office, and Deputy Horne and Coroner G. G. Ette visited the scene and removed the mutilated body.

Between the rails were found Seifert's fishing basket with a good catch of perch.

He is survived by his widow and five children, William, 22; Josephine, 20; Margaret, 18; Frank, 16, and an adopted son two years old.

#4. Joseph Seifert &

#5. Mary (Unknown)

(Joseph Seifert's Paternal Grandparents)

We know very little about Joseph and Mary Seifert. We only know their names because they were record in the naturalization documents of Robert Seifert, Franz's brother. We assume they were born in about 1850 in the area of Austria that their two boys, Robert and Franz, were born. Refer to the biographical sketches of Franz and Robert for information about Austria.

#6. Hermann Edourd Freiwald &

#7. Josephine Marohn

(Joseph Seifert's Maternal Grandparents)

We don't know for sure who were Joseph Seifert's maternal grandparents. In researching available documents and other family trees we find a set of possible parents of Anna Freiwald, although the pair presented are only a guess. Hermann and Josephine Feiwald were Polish, rather than Austrian, so there should be reasonable caution to not be too comfortable about the potential connection. In fact, the couple and their 14 children have documented roots in northern Poland, rather than the southern part that was adjacent to Austria (present day Czech Republic).

Since there is only a slim chance (<10%) that the persons shown are actually Anna's ancestors, biographical sketches will not be developed for them until greater evidence is obtained.

Pat Seifert & Randy Holub

Pat kissed her first boyfriend on Carmel Avenue, Allen Draves. He lived across the street. One day on the way home from second grade, my friend Judy Rome and I tackled him and got him down on the ground and Pat kissed him. He probably ran home. [14]

Pat's Brownie Troop had an outing to the Wind Point Lighthouse, including climbing all the way to the top and going out on the observation deck. What a view! Just a couple of years ago Randy and I did that same climb and it still is a spectacular view; you can see the Chicago Loop skyscrapers on a clear day. [14]

Patricia was known as "Patti" when she was young. Patti had pretty curly hair. Her mother remembers Patti as being very outgoing and very active in Girl Scouts.

One frigid day Pat recalled she walked to St. Catherine's High School when it was below zero, and they found they could not enter the building because a bomb threat had been called in. Luckily, Pat hooked up with a friend who lived only six blocks away and they went to her house and had hot chocolate. Pat's future husband, Randy Holub, told her long afterwards that the person that called in the bomb threat was a classmate/friend of his. However, I never knew Randy during those school years; he was a year ahead of me. My freshman year school was extremely crowded. Upperclassmen went to school starting at 7:30 or so, and we freshmen started at about 1:30 in the afternoon going till about 6:30. It was awful! Luckily that only lasted one year. . [14]

Being out of school and working in Racine in the early sixties was fun. Lots of new people to meet, places to go on dates including the Rialto and Venetian Theatres, and also places to dance and socialize, meet guys, and drink a little. Places to shop (Eitel's was Gail's favorite), take the train to Chicago or Milwaukee to shop, dress (or try to) like Audrey Hepburn and Grace Kelly. Turnstyle was the first discount store on Washington Avenue, a new experience. Supper clubs for date nights and necking in the car, although Daddy always waited up for us and would flick the porch light on and off if we didn't come in right away. . [14]

Lots of great memories growing up in Racine. Randy and I married in 1965, moved to Frankfort, Kentucky in 1967, to Kohler, Wisconsin in 1974, to Bettendorf, Iowa in 1991, to Prospect, Kentucky in 1996, and back home to Racine in 2015 to be closer to three of our children and their families. Many folks I've talked with have taken this route, returning to their roots. Even with all the changes here, it's comforting to be in familiar surroundings and reminisce when passing places we've been in our younger days. No regrets, just lots of great memories. . [14]

In 1960 Pat worked as a clerk at Sears [12]. In 1961-62 worked at American Bank & Trust. In 1963-65 she worked in the office of SC Johnson & Son.

Pat enjoys sewing, crocheting, recovering furniture, and play cards, especially bridge.

In 1970 Pat was living in Frankford, Kentucky [8]

In 1995 Randy and Pat lived in Bettendorf, Iowa. #1

Ann filled space in Huntington Beach, CA; and Barb Cedar Falls, IA. The Holub clan was spread to all and it had been over 2 years since they were all a mega Holub Holiday get together was called for. Venise lace, pearls and jewels were scattered on the fitted bodice of the bride's white taffeta gown. Cut on princess lines, it featured a peplum and a chapel train. Her bouffant veil fell from a queen's crown of crystals and pearls and she carried a cascade arrangement of phalaenopsis orchids with anaphalis and ivy. Her father gave her in marriage.

Proceeding her were attendants in burnt gold satin floor-length frocks, styled with scoop necklines and modified bell skirts. Virginia Rodenkirch was the maid of honor and Renee Seifert and Roberta Seifert were bridesmaids. Their flowers were cascades of pompons, chrysanthemums and ranunculus foliage.

Gary Sapp was the best man. Serving as groomsmen were Dennis Sapp and Richard Kochanski, and as ushers David Ellis of Bristol, Wis., and Walter Hayek. David Sapp was the ring bearer.

For the wedding and the reception later in Knights of Columbus clubrooms, Mrs. Seifert wore a three piece beige wool suit with black accessories and a corsage of phalaenopsis orchids and yellow garnet roses.
